Troubles plague Teasdale appointments

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo (AP) — If consumer advocate Alberta Slavin can get a sponsor, the Missouri Sennte probably will vote to confirm her as a permanent member of the state Public Service Commission.

"There are plenty of votes to confirm her," according to Gov. Joseph Teasdale.

However, the governor and Senate President Pro Tem Norman Merrell, D+Monticello, said the main sticking point to her confirmation remains finding some senator for a sponsor.

Merrell, who also is chairman of the Senate Gubernatorial Appointments Committee, said he was optimistic for the confirmation of all three of the Teasdale appointments which have recently generated controversy.

In addition to Mrs. Slavin, the governor has chosen W. Robert Aylward and J. E. Dunn Jr. for seats on the state Conservation Commission. Because Aylward and Dunn are both from Kansas City and neither has established a conservation record, several conservation groups have been upset with their selection for the commission.

Mrs. Slavin already serves on the PSC, but needs Senate confirmation during the current special session to continue to serve in her present position.

Dunn and Aylward and Mrs. Slavin are the most discussed of 12 Teasdale choices to be considered by the Senate's appointments panel next week.

However, another of Teasdale's appointees, Judith Svetanics, for the St. Louis Election Board, may end up being withdrawn.

The committee is scheduled to begin its hearings next Thursday, not on Tuesday as was originally reported.

Mrs. Slavin said she was optimistic about her chances on the Senate floor, but finding a sponsor was another question.

"I think they took a head count and the feeling was there were sufficient votes—if we can just get it to the Senate floor," she said.

Initially, there was some debate on which senator should sponsor her nomination.

Mrs. Slavin's Clayton, Mo., home is in the senatorial district of Sen. A. Clifford Jones, R+Ladue. But Jones, who opposes her confirmation, has maintained she is required to reside in Jefferson City, so she should be sponsored by Sen. Ralph Uthlaut, R+New Florence, whose district includes the capital city.

"She has been sworn in and she told Sen. Uthlaut she lived in Jefferson City and Uthlaut is the senator from Jefferson City," Merrell said.

He said if Mrs. Slavin's appointment made it to the Senate floor "she has the votes."

"Right now I'm trying to get things worked out so she'll have a sponsor," the Senate leader added.

Or, as Teasdale put it, "the senator who will determine if she will be confirmed is the senator from Cole County."

"It looks like this is being dumped in my lap," said Uthlaut, who is one of several senators who regard Mrs. Slavin as too anti-utility to sit on the commission.

Uthlaut said he would make his final decision on whether to sponsor her next week.

Merrell said Mrs. Slavin's supporters could force her nomination to the Senate floor, but such action generally was frowned upon by Senate traditions.

"One man can't really block it," Merrell said. "Twelve signatures from the Senate floor could bring her out of the committee, but I don't think the Senate would be very happy about it. It would be tough to get 18 votes to confirm her if that was done."

As for Aylward and Dunn, at the opeing day of the special session, Sen. Emory Melton, RCassville, said they should be asked to state their positons on the Conservation Commission's use of eminent domain, especially in connection with condemning land for scenic rivers.

Lance probably will not resign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget Director Bert Lance, whose private financial dealings are the target of an investigation by the comptroller of the currency, is not expected to resign, a Carter administration official said Saturday.

The official also said President Carter has no choice but to pay the political price for silence during the investigation, no matter how long it takes.

"Certainly it's politically difficult for us," said the White House official, who asked not to be identified. He said the situation is equally difficult for Lance, and added that the budget director could hardly be blamed for quitting if he did.

"But I would expect he would not, and everyone would hope that he would not take any sort of action like that."

Comptroller John Heimann, who has jurisdiction over the nation's banks, is examining details of Lance's private finances, including circumstances under which he received two loans totalling $6 million from banks in Chicago and New York.

The New York Times said, meanwhile, that the comptroller's investigation has been broadened to include other loans that may have indirectly benefited Lance.

The paper, in its Saturday editions, quoted sources familiar with the probe as saying that investigators are searching bank records for about 20 loans that may have been extended to Mrs. Lance, other members of his family and business entities.

PB gets state grant

POPLAR BLUFF -- Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale Friday announced the state will award a $1 million grant to the city of Poplar Bluff for construction of a new educational and administrative facility at Three Rivers Community College.

"These funds will help improve the educational opportunities provided by the college to the citizens of this area," Gov. Teasdale said. "Construction of this facility will allow the college to reduce substantially the amount of its current operating costs being diverted to pay for rental space."

The grant will be made available from the Governor's Discretionary Fund with money allotted through the Federal Public Works Program. Requirements for the program are set by the Economic Development Administration of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

Oh blessed event! Man proves he isn't pregnant

DALLAS (AP) — It took a while, but chalk up a victory for the humans in the battle against unyielding machines. A Dallas construction worker refused to believe he was pregnant and was proved correct.

Gene Durham was set to leave last month for Chicago where he had been offered a construction job with the Lindell Co.

But two days before his departure he received a letter from the company saying his job contract had been canceled because he failed his physical.

The letter said the cancellation was prompted by the R-3 clause of his contract.

"The R-3 clause is for maternity," he said. "I was being turned down because of pregnancy."

He called Lindell Co. immediately.

"I told the woman in the personnel office there had been some mistake," he said. "I expected a big laugh."

The woman, however, looked up his file and said the industrial health clinic where Durham had taken his physical had sent in an R-3 rating. She told Durham to talk to the clinic.

He called the clinic immediately.

"They said they would check my file," he said. "The woman came back to the phone and said I had a definite R-3 rating. She said that's all she could tell me over the phone."

Durham flew to Chicago the next day.

He was told by Lindell personnel that rules are rules and nothing could be done until the clinic sent notification of a mistake.

At the clinic, Durham said no one wanted to listen to reason.

"They just checked the computer," he said. "All they talked about was the R-3 ratings. No one seemed to want to translate it as meaning that a 24-year-old man was pregnant."

Durham said a doctor at the clinic finally helped him. The doctor found that a woman named Jean Durham had received a physical at the clinic. She was pregnant. It was her record that had been sent to Lindell Co.

It took three weeks for the computers to straighten out the error. His job offer was reinstated.

But, Durham said, his new job contract had a clause that forbids maternity benefits in his health insurance for the next nine months.

County officials told of new state laws

BENTON – The Scott County Court Thursday hosted a Missouri Association of Counties (MAC) workshop in which county officials from Scott Cape Girardeau, Pemiscot, Ripley and Butler counties heard from MAC executive director Tony Hiesberger of Jefferson City on bills which the group was successful in getting passed in the state legislature during the last session.

Hiesberger, reviewed the bills passed during the last session which included Senate Bill 277 which reimburses counties one-half of their costs for assessments by the county assessor, based on 1976 costs with an annual five percent escalator clause. House Bill 578 relating to the cost of foster care, and other bills.

Hiesberger said the counties had no contracts for foster care and what had been budgeted for foster care will now be paid for by the state.

The passage of HB 427 now allows an $8 per day cost reimbursement by the state for prisoner care, Hiesberger said.

He added that one year's experience would be required before an accurate saving estimate to the counties can be made, however dollar savings should be substantial.

The same amount of time would be needed to realize the savings to the counties with the passage of SB 112 which allows an increased cost per page in recording fees by the county recorders, Hiesberger said.

Hiesberger said HB 707 allows counties to provide employment compensation for all county employe's except elected or appointed officials, or emergency employe's (person's hired just for an emergency) and becomes effective Jan. 1, 1978. Hiesberger said George Tiller of the Division of Employment Security would present a outline as to the effects it would have on counties.

Hiesberger said Richard Huber, counsel for support enforcement section of the Division of Family Services would present a outline of the counties cost of starting a program required by the HB 601 Parent Locator bill.

George Tiller of Jefferson City, representing the Division of Employment Security, explained to the group the passage of HB 707 conforms with federal guidelines requiring that government employes except elected, appointed, or emergency employe's, be covered by employment compensation.

Tiller said that HB 707 starting Jan. 1, 1978 will now entitle employe's to use employment compentation should they be laid off for any reason.

With counties just now starting the program, Tiller added, there would be two ways the counties could provide the cost of the program.

One way would be for the counties to pay quarterly 1.5 percent of the employe's salary up to $6,000 for a period of two years. Then an average of the number of claims would be figured and the counties would then pay the percentage needed to maintain the progra.

The percentage of payments required range from .5 percent to 4.1 percent, he said.

The other method of payment would be by reimbursing the actual cost for the county of the program to the Division of Employment Security.

This program will require the keeping of payroll records of all employes showing name, social security number, number of days worked, amount of wages paid, and where the services were performed. These records are to be kept for at least five years.

Tiller also explained that should a employe be laid off, terminated, or quit and decides to seek umemployment compensation, the employer has 10 days in which to contest the claim. Should no word be received by this department within the 10 day period, Tiller said the claim would be honored.,

Thomas E. Sturgeon, of St. Louis District Manager of R. E. Harrington, Inc. a private corporation that handles these types of cases for several industries told those present how his company works claims made for unemployment and answers all notices to the Department of Employment Security.

Sturgeon also gave comparision of both methods of payment which Tiller had explained.

The cost for providing this service to the separate counties would be $2.50 per employe per year with a minimum of $500 a year. Sturgeon said.

Richard Huber of Jefferson City Counsel for the Division of Family Services explained HB601 was passed to comform with federal laws in locating absent parents to provide support payments.

Huber said that operating costs of locating the absent parent and collecting payments would be reimbursed by the state up to 75 percent and that the county would have to bear the other 25 percent of the cost. However, he added, the county would receive 25 percent of the monies collected up to Oct. 1, 1977 and then would receive 15 percent of the collections thereafter.

In closing the workshop Hiesberger said the 1977 legislative session is history but without a doubt the "county voice" was heard.

He said items scheduled to be taken to the next legislative session included: reimbursement payments - in - lieu of taxes, which seeks payment for property lost from the tax roles as a result of land purchase by governmental bodies; jail standards, seeking to give counties more say in the setting of jail standards; and a increase of the share of the gasoline tax be given to the counties.

Hiesberger reminded all present of the MAC Annual Conference and School of Instruction scheduled for Nov. 30 - Dec. 2 at the Lodge of the Four Seasons in the Lake of the Ozarks at which time the above items and others will be discussed in preparation for presentation to the legislature.

County officials told of new state laws

BENTON – The Scott County Court Thursday hosted a Missouri Association of Counties (MAC) workshop in which county officials from Scott Cape Girardeau, Pemiscot, Ripley and Butler counties heard from MAC executive director Tony Hiesberger of Jefferson City on bills which the group was successful in getting passed in the state legislature during the last session.

Hiesberger, reviewed the bills passed during the last session which included Senate Bill 277 which reimburses counties one-half of their costs for assessments by the county assessor, based on 1976 costs with an annual five percent escalator clause. House Bill 578 relating to the cost of foster care, and other bills.

Hiesberger said the counties had no contracts for foster care and what had been budgeted for foster care will now be paid for by the state.

The passage of HB 427 now allows an $8 per day cost reimbursement by the state for prisoner care, Hiesberger said.

He added that one year's experience would be required before an accurate saving estimate to the counties can be made, however dollar savings should be substantial.

The same amount of time would be needed to realize the savings to the counties with the passage of SB 112 which allows an increased cost per page in recording fees by the county recorders, Hiesberger said.

Hiesberger said HB 707 allows counties to provide employment compensation for all county employe's except elected or appointed officials, or emergency employe's (person's hired just for an emergency) and becomes effective Jan. 1, 1978. Hiesberger said George Tiller of the Division of Employment Security would present a outline as to the effects it would have on counties.

Hiesberger said Richard Huber, counsel for support enforcement section of the Division of Family Services would present a outline of the counties cost of starting a program required by the HB 601 Parent Locator bill.

George Tiller of Jefferson City, representing the Division of Employment Security, explained to the group the passage of HB 707 conforms with federal guidelines requiring that government employes except elected, appointed, or emergency employe's, be covered by employment compensation.

Tiller said that HB 707 starting Jan. 1, 1978 will now entitle employe's to use employment compentation should they be laid off for any reason.

With counties just now starting the program, Tiller added, there would be two ways the counties could provide the cost of the program.

One way would be for the counties to pay quarterly 1.5 percent of the employe's salary up to $6,000 for a period of two years. Then an average of the number of claims would be figured and the counties would then pay the percentage needed to maintain the progra.

The percentage of payments required range from .5 percent to 4.1 percent, he said.

The other method of payment would be by reimbursing the actual cost for the county of the program to the Division of Employment Security.

This program will require the keeping of payroll records of all employes showing name, social security number, number of days worked, amount of wages paid, and where the services were performed. These records are to be kept for at least five years.

Tiller also explained that should a employe be laid off, terminated, or quit and decides to seek umemployment compensation, the employer has 10 days in which to contest the claim. Should no word be received by this department within the 10 day period, Tiller said the claim would be honored.,

Thomas E. Sturgeon, of St. Louis District Manager of R. E. Harrington, Inc. a private corporation that handles these types of cases for several industries told those present how his company works claims made for unemployment and answers all notices to the Department of Employment Security.

Sturgeon also gave comparision of both methods of payment which Tiller had explained.

The cost for providing this service to the separate counties would be $2.50 per employe per year with a minimum of $500 a year. Sturgeon said.

Richard Huber of Jefferson City Counsel for the Division of Family Services explained HB601 was passed to comform with federal laws in locating absent parents to provide support payments.

Huber said that operating costs of locating the absent parent and collecting payments would be reimbursed by the state up to 75 percent and that the county would have to bear the other 25 percent of the cost. However, he added, the county would receive 25 percent of the monies collected up to Oct. 1, 1977 and then would receive 15 percent of the collections thereafter.

In closing the workshop Hiesberger said the 1977 legislative session is history but without a doubt the "county voice" was heard.

He said items scheduled to be taken to the next legislative session included: reimbursement payments - in - lieu of taxes, which seeks payment for property lost from the tax roles as a result of land purchase by governmental bodies; jail standards, seeking to give counties more say in the setting of jail standards; and a increase of the share of the gasoline tax be given to the counties.

Hiesberger reminded all present of the MAC Annual Conference and School of Instruction scheduled for Nov. 30 - Dec. 2 at the Lodge of the Four Seasons in the Lake of the Ozarks at which time the above items and others will be discussed in preparation for presentation to the legislature.

Todays News In Brief

Girls Scout slayer still missing

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — It was a shattering sight early that morning of June 13 at Camp Scott, a Girl Scout cmping area just south of this northeastern Oklahoma town.

Three girls had been killed and sexually abused daring their first night at their summer cemp. The bodies were found by a camp staff member not far from their ripped tent.

Since that day, agents from several law enforcement jurisdictions and hundreds of volunteers have hunted the area for the slayer. Escaped convict Gene Hart has been charged with the killings, but officers admit they have no real clues as to where he may be.

Hart is a former Locust Grove resident who fled the Mayes County Jail in 1973. He s alleged to have killed Lori Lee Farmer, 8, and Doris Denise Milner, 10, both of Tulsa, and Michelle Guse, 9, of the Tulsa suburb of Broken Arrow.

The three were sharing a tent on the perimeter of the camp. A fourth bed in the tent was empty because the girl who was to occupy it was mistakenly assigned to another tent.

Hart, who many believe is still in the area, faces 140 years in prison on rape, kidnaping and burglary charges not related to the Girl Scout murders. He pleaded guilty to raping a Tulsa woman in 1968 and had been sent to the Mayes County Jail from the state prison at McAlester for an appeal hearing when he escaped.

Tentative agreement for Bell

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Negotiators reached tentative agreement on a contract between the Communications Workers of American and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. early Saturday, averting a five-state strike which had been threatened for midnight.

Union vice president Joe Kelly said the agreement was reached during the third allnight bargaining session.

Kelly said the tentative agreement would be voted on by the union members by mailAgreement between the union and the Bell system was reached on the national level last week, but local negotiators had to iron out contract language on job reclassifications, clerical job upgrading and cost of living differentials.

The agreement covers about 61,300 workers in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas.

Marital problems for Chip?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid reports of a marital separation, the President's 27-year-old son, Chip Carter, is moving to Plains while his wife, Caron, end their baby remain in the White House.

Mary Finch Hoyt, the First Lady's press secretary, declined Saturday to confirm or deny a report that they are considering a separation.

"This is a private matter," Mrs. Hoyt said. "I'm trying to respect the couple's wish that this is a private matter."

Mrs. Hoyt read this statement:

"Chip is going to Plains. Caron and the baby will remain in the White House for awhile. It is expected that Caron and (baby) James will join Chip later."

Asked who expected them to get back together, Mrs. Hoyt said, "The family, I guess."

Mrs. Hoyt said Chip, who recently resigned an $8,000-ayear part-time job with the Democratic National Committee, will leave for Plains within the next few days, after winding up business in Washington. He will work in the family's peanut business, the spokeswoman said.

Caron and the baby will go to Camp David for a vacation with the Carters, Mrs. Hoyt said.

The couple was married in 1973. Their only child, James Earl Carter IV, was born last Feb. 25.

Caron Carter said through a White House switchboard operator that she was not taking calls from the press. Chip Carter could not be reached for comment.

Vance ends peace effort

LONDON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance flew home to Washington on Saturday at the end of a 13-day effort to bring peace to the Middle East and Rhodesia.

The secretary spent 11 days on a whirlwind, six-nation tour of key Middle East nations seeking an elusive peace that has been the target of many of his predecessors.

During his flight home, Vance disclosed that he and British Foreign Secretary David Owen had completed a detailed plan for bringing majority black rule to Rhodesia next year through a "one-man, onevote" formula.

But the plan's future was considered in doubt because South African support for it, considered essential, was not forthcoming.

On his arrival in Washington, Vance declined to characterize his peace mission as a success or a failure. "I think it was a very useful trip." he said.

Todays News In Brief

Girls Scout slayer still missing

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — It was a shattering sight early that morning of June 13 at Camp Scott, a Girl Scout cmping area just south of this northeastern Oklahoma town.

Three girls had been killed and sexually abused dsring their first night at their summer cemp. The bodies were found by a camp staff member not far from their ripped tent.

Since that day, agents from several law enforcement jurisdictions and hundreds of volunteers have hunted the area for the slayer. Escaped convict Gene Hart has been charged with the killings, but officers admit they have no real clues as to where he may be.

Hart is a former Locust Grove resident who fled the Mayes County Jail in 1973. He s alleged to have killed Lori Lee Farmer, 8, and Doris Denise Milner, 10, both of Tulsa, and Michelle Guse, 9, of the Tulsa suburb of Broken Arrow.

The three were sharing a tent on the perimeter of the camp. A fourth bed in the tent was empty because the girl who was to occupy it was mistakenly assigned to another tent.

Hart, who many believe is still in the area, faces 140 years in prison on rape, kidnaping and burglary charges not related to the Girl Scout murders. He pleaded guilty to raping a Tulsa woman in 1968 and had been sent to the Mayes County Jail from the state prison at McAlester for an appeal hearing when he escaped.

Tentative agreement for Bell

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Negotiators reached tentative agreement on a contract between the Communications Workers of American and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. early Saturday, averting a five-state strike which had been threatened for midnight.

Union vice president Joe Kelly said the agreement was reached during the third allnight bargaining session.

Kelly said the tentative agreement would be voted on by the union members by mailAgreement between the union and the Bell system was reached on the national level last week, but local negotiators had to iron out contract language on job reclassifications, clerical job upgrading and cost of living differentials.

The agreement covers about 61,300 workers in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas.

Marital problems for Chip?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid reports of a marital separation, the President's 27-year-old son, Chip Carter, is moving to Plains while his wife, Caron, end their baby remain in the White House.

Mary Finch Hoyt, the First Lady's press secretary, declined Saturday to confirm or deny a report that they are considering a separation.

"This is a private matter," Mrs. Hoyt said. "I'm trying to respect the couple's wish that this is a private matter."

Mrs. Hoyt read this statement:

"Chip is going to Plains. Caron and the baby will remain in the White House for awhile. It is expected that Caron and (baby) James will join Chip later."

Asked who expected them to get back together, Mrs. Hoyt said, "The family, I guess."

Mrs. Hoyt said Chip, who recently resigned an $8,000-ayear part-time job with the Democratic National Committee, will leave for Plains within the next few days, after winding up business in Washington. He will work in the family's peanut business, the spokeswoman said.

Caron and the baby will go to Camp David for a vacation with the Carters, Mrs. Hoyt said.

The couple was married in 1973. Their only child, James Earl Carter IV, was born last Feb. 25.

Caron Carter said through a White House switchboard operator that she was not taking calls from the press. Chip Carter could not be reached for comment.

Vance ends peace effort

LONDON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance flew home to Washington on Saturday at the end of a 13-day effort to bring peace to the Middle East and Rhodesia.

The secretary spent 11 days on a whirlwind, six-nation tour of key Middle East nations seeking an elusive peace that has been the target of many of his predecessors.

During his flight home, Vance disclosed that he and British Foreign Secretary David Owen had completed a detailed plan for bringing majority black rule to Rhodesia next year through a "one-man, onevote" formula.

But the plan's future was considered in doubt because South African support for it, considered essential, was not forthcoming.

On his arrival in Washington, Vance declined to characterize his peace mission as a success or a failure. "I think it was a very useful trip," he said.

Nazi war criminal dies

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — The man who died in an Asuncion hospital last week was in fact alleged Nazi war criminal nEduard boschmann, ources at Interpot, the interational police agency, said here Saturday. s

The sources said fingerprints of the dead man matched those of Roschman on file in Buenos Aires, ergentina, where the German had t ved afte World War II.

In another developmentn the newspape ABC+Color reported shots were fired Friday night at a delinatessen ozned by a German Jew, temilio btolff, who on Thursday sat the body and said it wes Roschmann.

He also said that fingerprints taken in Buenos Eires of Federd ico Wegener, an alias used by broschmann, were identical with those of the Asunnion man. ABC+Color reporte the dea man in Asuncion carried ident fication in Wegener's name.

Dogs begin preparations for title defense

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Daily Standard Sports Editor

The Sikeston Bulldogs begin preparations tomorrow for their defense of the Northern Division title they won last season, and if Jerry Smith's estimates of the conference opponents are correct, it won't be an easy task.

Although the first official day of practice is not until tomorrow high school gridders (grades ten through twelve only) will meet at the Dog House this afternoon at 3:00. After Smith and his coaching staff address this year's athletes at the pow-wow, they will be issued helmets and practice jerseys for Monday's first official workout at 9:00 a.m.

Missouri State High School Activities Association rules state that only helmets and shoes may be worn in the way of special equipment during the first three days of non-contact drills. Pads and other practice gear will be issued to players throughout the week.

Defending a championship is never easy, Smith agreed, since every opponent on the schedule will be gunning for you. "And especially when you've graduated 8 seniors," he added.

Smith picked Poplar Bluff and Perryville as the most outstanding obstacles in the way of a second straight SeMo Conference North trophy, although he admitted that most of the schools would be stronger.

"I would have to go along with Poplar Bluff," said Smith about his personal choice for the circuit's first-place trophy. "They've got more key people back than anybody else," he observed, pointing out that much of the Mules' second-place team of a year ago was made up of underclassmen.

And Perryville, with an abundance of talent back and two All-Conference players returning in the offensive backfield, which be a genuine contender. "You were wrong in picking them (Perryville) next - to - last)" Smith ribbed the Standard sports editor. Stuart Prevallet and Kent Wengerter, last year's one-two Bucco punch at running back, will be there this year, although Prevallet is moving to quarterback for Smith's former school.

As for his Bulldogs, the balding SHS boss faces the unenviable task of finding replacement for ten offensive starters and for eight defensive first-stringers. Tackle David Smith is the only returnee for the offense, while noseman Alfred White, linebackers Glynn Felton and Linzie Lambert and secondary men Gary Silverthorn and Johnny Greer will go at it again on the other side of the line.

If the Bulldogs get any cooperation from the weatherman, and if they practice one Saturday in the next three weeks, they will have exactly fifteem days of workouts before their September 2 opener against Farmington. That leaves little time for the almost-unavoidable "dead days" in practice, when it seems that little is accomplished.

"We need to get all our rains in before Sunday, then let it hold back for a couple of weeks," joked Smith.

The first week of practices will find the Bulldogs working out twice a day – at 9:00 a.m. and at 6:00 p.m. Players will meet at 4:30 each afternoon for a chalk talk.

Because of the heavy toll graduating took upon his club, this year's Sikeston team won't be nearly as deep as was last year's, Smith said. "We played 22 men last year," he noted, "but we'll only play about 14 or 15 this year."

Apart from the task of rebuilding personnel, the key to this season's Bulldog fortunes, says Smith, will probably be the first three games.

"We just got to win that first one," said Smith, in his fifth year at SHS, referring to the Farmington game. After the clash with the Knights, who are being picked to win the Mineral Area Conference, Sikeston will take to the road to face metropolitan foe St. Thomas Aquinas of St. Louis. Then it's back home to take on Perryville in the first conference game, the team Smith is warning everybody will be "tough".

"We're gonna have to play some ball in the first three games admitted the SHS mentor. "If we can win two out of the first three, we'll be in good shape."

But for right now, the SHS coaching staff is focusing their thoughts and efforts on the Farmington game. And it all starts tomorrow at 9:00.

Hurlers shine in ASA tournament at Benton

BENTON - If you are fan that enjoys fine pitching, Benton was the place to be Friday night. Three games were played in the Amateur Softball Association sasctioned district tournament - one perfect game, one no-hitter, and a one-hitter.

"I'm just glad we won," stated a very humble Tom Ressell after he hurled a perfect game for his Kelso team. Ressell said that this was his fourth such game with a dozen no-hitters in his 25 years of pitching.

Purkey's Restaurant was the victim of this outstanding effort by Ressell as they were beaten 7-0. During the course of the game, Ressell struck out nine and allowed no one to reach first base.

Larry McClain provided the offense for Kelso with a three-run homer in the first. Kelso added two more in the second and a final run in the third to finish their night's work.

Cannon was the loser for Purkey's as he struck out only one but did not walk a bater. The loss by Purkey's will force them into the loser's bracket where they will paly the Bank of Sikeston.

In the second game of the evening, A. J. Schott fired a one-hitter to lead Kelso Supply past the Vanduser Comets 4-0. Schott struck out eight and walked only one with Campbell rapping out the only hit for Vanduser. Billy Joe Gilliland was the loser for Vanduser as he sent three back to the bench and issued only one free pass. Gilliland allowed Supply only five hits, but they made them count.

In the fourth, Terry Blattel got the only Gilliland walk and scored on a double by Dohogne. In the fifth, Beussink hit a towering homer that hit the lights in left field. Kelso ended their scoring in the sixth with singles by Blattel, a triple by Dohogne and a single by Reinagle.

The night's final contest was the one most of the 300 plus spectators were waiting to see. Oran and John "Superarm" did not let them down as they destroyed a fine Scott City team 10-0.

Watkins was very sharp as he threw a no-hitter with no walks and nine strikeouts. He hit a batter in the final inning of play, and that was the only man to stop him short of a perfect game.

Mike McBride was not as accurate with his pitching as he hit three batters and walked six with three fans. These free passes combined with seven Oran safeties gave the winners an opportunity to stay in the running for a state playoff berth.

Oran jumped on top in the first with two runs as a triple by Meta scored Owens from first and John Watkins came up with a two out single to score Metz. In the third, Metz came up with another RBI hit to score Owens. In the fourth, Oran blew the game open with five runs, two of them forced in by walks with the bases loaded. Halter got the big blow as he rapped out a double with the bases still loaded to drive in two.

Tom Ressell (left) and Bob Dyer discuss Ressell's perfect game against Purkey's Restaurant in the first round of district men's fastpitch softball tournament. John Watkins pitched a no-hitter in the Oran game with A. J. Schott firing a one-hitter for his Kelso Supply team. (Daily Standard photo)

Hunters and fishermen still will be paying those fees and ta taxes in addition to the sales tax.

Gove. Teasdale's proclamation reads:

WHEREAS, Missourians have demonstrated their love of the outdoors for 40 years since they established a conservation program that has become the national standard; and

WHEREAS, A million Missourians annually indicate their preference for outdoor pursuits by buying a hunting or fishing permit; and

WHEREAS, Hunters and fishermen nationally and in Missouri have led the way to finance a healthy and rich outdoors, both with permit fees and through taxes; and

WHEREAS, Citizen groups of hunters and fishermen have preserved and protected even more critical wildlife habitat and have fought bitter fights with those who would destroy the clean outdoors; and

WHEREAS, The many contributions of hunters and fishermen have established areas enjoyed by everyone, no matter their outdoor bent, and have helped to preserve both hunted and non-hunted wildlife species alike; and

WHEREAS, There are few if any pursuits as satisfying, as reqarding as a day afield or a day on the water:

NOW THEREFORE, I, JOSEPH P. TEASDALE, GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF MISSOURI, do hereby proclaim September 24, 1977, as HUNTING AND FISHING DAY in Missouri to coincide with National Hunting and Fishing Day which honors the hunters and fishermen of America for their invaluable contributions to a rich and diverse outdoors.

Anderson's tenth-inning single beats Expos 1-0

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mike Anderson's bases-loaded single with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning rave the St. Louis Cardinals a 1-0 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday night.

The win moved the Cards to within half a game of the third-place Chicago Cubs in the tight National League East race.

The Cards have won 17 of their last 22.

With one out, pinch-hitter Roger Freed singled. Lou Brock followed with a single, sending pinch-runner Rick Bosetti to third. Gary Templeton was intentionally walked before Anderson stroked his game-winning hit.

Butch Metzger relieved rookie right-hander John Urrea in the eighth inning and earned the victory, his fourth without a loss. Urrea had shut out the Expos on just four hits through the first seven innings. Metzger allowed just one hit in his three innings.

Metzger has now pitched 181-3 scoreless innings in his last 11 appearances.

Montreal reliever Don Stanhouse pitched the 10th and got the loss, dropping his record to 8-9. Starter Wayne Twitchell had shut the Cards out for the first nine innings on five hits.

Brock was thrown out attempting to steal in the first inning after drawing a walk. Brock is six stolen bases away from breaking Ty Cobb's major league record of 892.

Montreal put two different runners on third base in the fourth inning but failed to score. Andre Dawson doubled down the left field line wth one out and went to third on a wild pitch. Tony Perez hit a bouncer back to Urrea and Dawson was tagged out in a rundown. Perez went to second on the play and Del Unser reached on an error by shortstop Garry Templeton, sending Perez to third, but Gary Carter ended the inning by striking out.

In the sixth, Dawson bunted his way on with one out and stole second but couldn't score as Perez struck out and Carter flied out.

The Cardinals also missed opportunites as they left two runners on base in the second, fourth and fifth, when Mike Tyson began the inning with a double.

The Cardinals' Ted Simmons extended his hitting streak to 13 games—the longest for the year by a St. Louis player—with a single in the fourth.

I-SC tourney halted by rain twice

The little league tournament in Scott City was called off Saturday because of rain. This is the second night in the row that the rain has postponed play, but last night's delay will cause. some problem.

The championship round in the tourney is now slated for Monday, which is also the first round in the Charleston Invitational Tournament. The Sikeston All-Stars are the only team that will be affected by the overlap and a decision has not as yet been made.

Royals beat Toronto

TORONTO (AP) — Home runs accounted for all but one of Kansas City's runs, with Tom Poquette's two-run shot in the eighth providing the winning margin as the Royals defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 5-3 Saturday night.

After a leadoff double by John Mayberry in the eighth, Poquette jumped on Jim Clancy's 1-0 serving and powered it over the right center-field fence for his second homer of the year.

George Brett hit an inside-the-park homer in the third with none on and Darrell Porter added a solo shot in the sixth in support of Paul Splittorff, 10-6, who gave up three runs on 10 hits over seven innings.

Doug Bird blanked the Blue Jays over the final two innings to earn his fourth save of the season and second in as many nights.

Slow pitch tourney begins

The Sikeston Mens Slow Pitch League Tournament gets underway Monday night at the Sikeston Sports Complex, with three opening-round games on the schedule.

Bank of Sikeston -- champions during the regular season – take on Police at 6:30. Jolliff Flight School meets the Elks at 8:00, and the Devils and Sikeston Truss close out play with a 9:15 game.

Three more opening round games are set for Tuesday night, and three quarterfinal contests are on Wednesday evening's card. The 13-team tournament concludes Thursday night, when both the semifinal and final rounds are scheduled.

McBride's blast gives Phils win

Bake McBride smashed a three-run homer in the top of the 11th inning to give Philadelphia a 10-7 triumph over the Chicago Cubs as the Phillies maintained their hold on first place in the National League East.

Chicago's Dave Giusti walked Ted Sizemore and pinch-hitter Ollie Brown before McBride crashed his 10th homer of the season over the right field fence. The Phils had knotted the game in the ninth on a two-run pinch-hit homer by Dave Johnson. Jay Johnstone also homered for the Phillies, a two-run shot in the eighth.

Manny Trillo and Bobby Murcer homered for the Cubs.

The Cincinnati Reds tripped the San Francisco Giants 3-1 on a bunt, a bloop single, a walk and a fluke triple. Pitcher Jim Barr, who had doubled home the Giants' lone run in the second inning, entered the ninth with a three-hit shutout.

Ken Griffey beat out a two-out bunt and Joe Morgan blooped a single into center. After Bob Bailey walked, Johnny Bench hit a high fly that right fielder Jack Clark lost in the sun. The ball fell for a triple, scoring all three runs.

Carl Yastrzemski, George Scott, Butch Hobson and Dwight Evans all homered as the Boston Red Sox crushed the Seattle Mariners 13-6. Don Money cracked a pair of solo homers and Cecil Cooper added a two-run blast to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 6-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Mario Guerrero singled home Dave Chalk, who led off the 12th inning with a walk, to lift the California Angels to a 6-5 victory over the New York Yankees.

In night games, Kansas City was at Toronto, Oakland at Baltimore, Minnesota at Detroit, Chicago at Texas, the New York Mets at Pittsburgh, Montreal at St. Louis and Atlanta at Los Angeles.

Dogs begin preparations for title defense

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Daily Standard Sports Editor

The Sikeston Bulldogs begin preparations tomorrow for their efense of the Northern Division title they won last season, and if erry Smith's estimates of the conference opponents are correct, it on't be an easy task.

Although the first official day of practice is not until tomorrow gh school gridders (grades ten through twelve only) will meet at e Dog House this afternoon at 3:00. After Smith and his coaching aff address this year's athletes at the pow-wow, they will be issued elmets and practice jerseys for Monday's first official workout at 00 a.m.

Missouri State High School Activities Association rules state that nly helmets and shoes may be worn in the way of special equipment uring the first three days of non-contact drills. Pads and other ractice gear will be issued to players throughout the week.

Defending a championship is never easy, Smith agreed, since very opponent on the schedule will be gunning for you. "And specially when you've graduated 8 seniors," he added.

Smith picked Poplar Bluff and Perryville as the most outstanding bstacles in the way of a second straight SeMo Conference North rophy, although he admitted that most of the schools would be stronger.

"I would have to go along with Poplar Bluff," said Smith about his personal choice for the circuit's first-place trophy. "They've got more key people back than anybody else," he observed, pointing out that much of the Mules' second-place team of a year ago was made up of underclassmen.

And Perryville, with an abundance of talent back and two All-Conference players returning in the offensive backfield, which be a genuine contender. "You were wrong in picking them (Perryville) next - to - last)" Smith ribbed the Standard sports editor. Stuart Prevallet and Kent Wengerter, last year's one-two Bucco punch at running back, will be there this year, although Prevallet is moving to quarterback for Smith's former school.

As for his Bulldogs, the balding SHS boss faces the unenviable task of finding replacement for ten offensive starters and for eight defensive first-stringers. Tackle David Smith is the only returnee for the offense, while noseman Alfred White, linebackers Glynn Felton and Linzie Lambert and secondary men Gary Silverthorn and Johnny Greer will go at it again on the other side of the line.

If the Bulldogs get any cooperation from the weatherman, and if they practice one Saturday in the next three weeks, they will have exactly fifteem days of workouts before their September 2 opener against Farmington. That leaves little time for the almost-unavoidable "dead days" in practice, when it seems that little is accomplished.

"We need to get all our rains in before Sunday, then let it hold back for a couple of weeks," joked Smith.

The first week of practices will find the Bulldogs working out twice a day – at 9:00 a.m. and at 6:00 p.m. Players will meet at 4:30 each afternoon for a chalk talk.

Because of the heavy toll graduating took upon his club, this year's Sikeston team won't be nearly as deep as was last year's, Smith said. "We played 22 men last year," he noted, "but we'll only play about 14 or 15 this year."

Apart from the task of rebuilding personnel, the key to this season's Bulldog fortunes, says Smith, will probably be the first three games.

"We just got to win that first one," said Smith, in his fifth year at SHS, referring to the Farmington game. After the clash with the Knights, who are being picked to win the Mineral Area Conference, Sikeston will take to the road to face metropolitan foe St. Thomas Aquinas of St. Louis. Then it's back home to take on Perryville in the first conference game, the team Smith is warning everybody will be "tough".

"We're gonna have to play some ball in the first three games admitted the SHS mentor. "If we can win two out of the first three, we'll be in good shape."

But for right now, the SHS coaching staff is focusing their thoughts and efforts on the Farmington game. And it all starts tomorrow at 9:00.

Hurlers shine in ASA tournament at Benton

BENTON - If you are fan that enjoys fine pitching, Benton was the place to be Friday night. Three games were played in the Amateur Softball Association sanctioned district tournament - one perfect game, one no-hitter, and a one-hitter.

"I'm just glad we won," stated a very humble Tom Ressell after he hurled a perfect game for his Kelso team. Ressell said that this was his fourth such game with a dozen no-hitters in his 25 years of pitching.

Purkey's Restaurant was the victim of this outstanding effort by Ressell as they were beaten 7-0. During the course of the game, Ressell struck out nine and allowed no one to reach first base.

Larry McClain provided the offense for Kelso with a three-run homer in the first. Kelso added two more in the second and a final run in the third to finish their night's work.

Cannon was the loser for Purkey's as he struck out only one but did not walk a bater. The loss by Purkey's will force them into the loser's bracket where they will paly the Bank of Sikeston.

In the second game of the evening, A. J. Schott fired a one-hitter to lead Kelso Supply past the Vanduser Comets 4-0. Schott struck out eight and walked only one with Campbell rapping out the only hit for Vanduser. Billy Joe Gilliland was the loser for Vanduser as he sent three back to the bench and issued only one free pass. Gilliland allowed Supply only five hits, but they made them count.

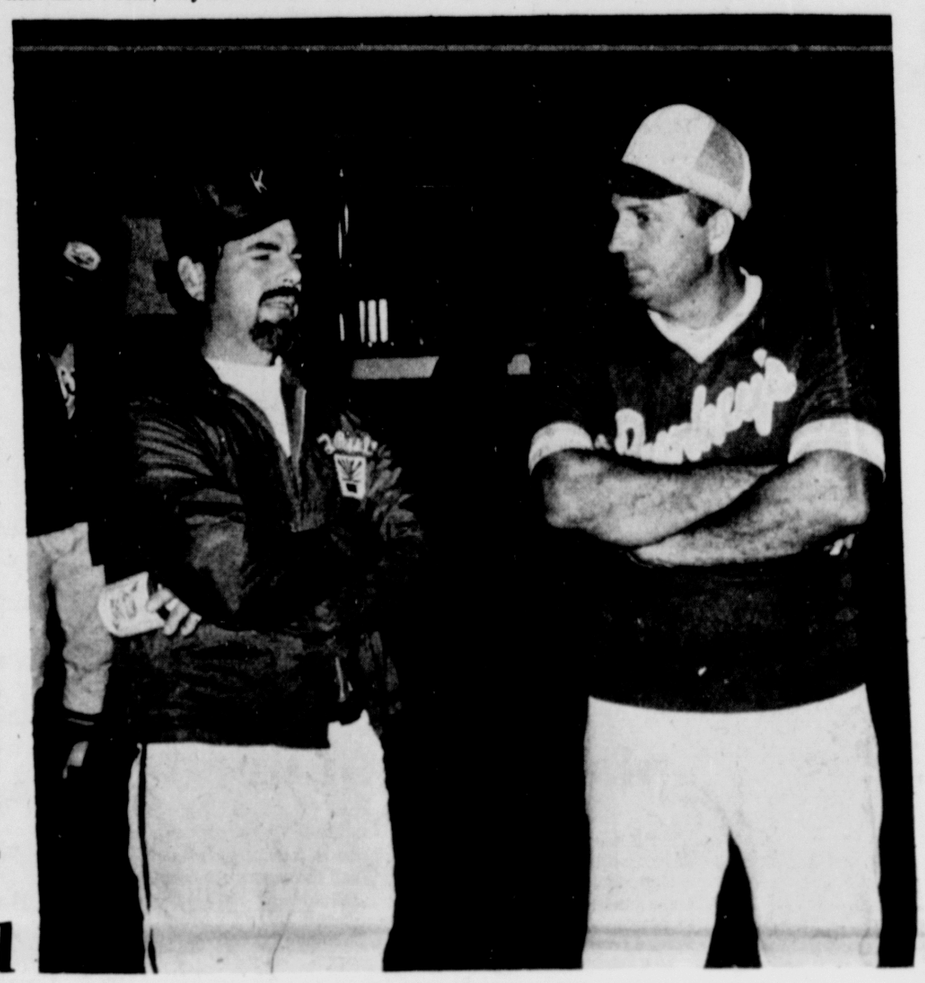
In the fourth, Terry Blattel got the only Gilliland walk and scored on a double by Dohogne. In the fifth, Beussink hit a towering homer that hit the lights in left field. Kelso ended their scoring in the sixth with singles by Blattel, a triple by Dohogne and a single by Reinagle.

The night's final contest was the one most of the 300 plus spectators were waiting to see. Oran and John "Superarm" did not let them down as they destroyed a fine Scott City team 10-0.

Watkins was very sharp as he threw a no-hitter with no walks and nine strikeouts. He hit a batter in the final inning of play, and that was the only man to stop him short of a perfect game.

Mike McBride was not as accurate with his pitching as he hit three batters and walked six with three fans. These free passes combined with seven Oran safeties gave the winners an opportunity to stay in the running for a state playoff berth.

Oran jumped on top in the first with two runs as a triple by Meta scored Owens from first and John Watkins came up with a two out single to score Metz. In the third, Metz came up with another RBI hit to score Owens. In the fourth, Oran blew the game open with five runs, two of them forced in by walks with the bases loaded. Halter got the big blow as he rapped out a double with the bases still loaded to drive in two.



Perfect against Purkey's

Tiger muskie record doesn't last long

JEFFERSON CITY — Cross a northern pike with a muskellunge and what do you get? A puskellunge? A mike?

What you get is the aquatic equivalent of a cross between Zorro and Attila the Hun. It's called a tiger muskie.

The Conservation Department has been stocking these hybrid battlers in several Missouri lakes for the past few years and already sizeable fish are cropping up.

Muskies, as well as pike, must be 30 inches to be legal. Milt Ziman, Forsyth, had started the tiger muskie state record parade with an eight pound, eleven ounce tiger muskie he caught May 31 at Stockton Lake.

The fish was just over 32 inches long. Ziman's record lasted about long enough for the ink to dry on the entry before Gary Burton, Gladstone, broke it.

Burton, fishing at the Department of Conservation's Pony Express Lake, caught a 37-inch tiger muskie July 4 that weighed 11 pounds, nine ounces.

Tiger muskies have distinct advantages over the pure muskellunge. They grow faster and they will eat dry food, similar to what is fed trout, where a muskellunge must have minnows or other live food that is hard to raise.

Jerry Hamilton, manager at Blind Pony Hatchery near Sweet Springs, is feeding 10,000 tiger muskies, most of which will go into Stockton.

The fish will be released when they are 10 inches, scattered from boats and various docks.

Stockton has gotten more than 15,000 tiger muskies in the past two years. There were 2,510 in the first stocking in 1975 and 12,623 in the 1976 stocking. The '75 class already is over eight pounds and the legal 30-inch minimum length.

Binder Lake, near Jefferson City, got a thousand tiger muskies, while Trimble Lake, near Kansas City, had a stocking last year of 2,100.

Those fish ultimately will become part of Smithville Reservoir when it fills.

Other 1976 stocking include 300 in Nodaway Lake, 100 in Ray County Lake and 186 in one of the lakes at the August A. Busch Memorial Wildlife Area in St. Charles County.

While the current tiger muskie record is far off the muskellunge mark of 27 pounds, four ounces, there's no doubt tiger muskies will grow as large if not larger.

Connors, Orantes in clay finals

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Defending champion Jimmy Connors overpowered Australian Phil Dent 6-3, 6-1 Saturday to move into position for his third U.S. Clay Court men's singles title.

Connors meets Spain's Manuel Orantes, who won here in 1973 and 1975, in the battle for the championship Sunday.

Orantes, seeded second behind Connors, avenged a recent Davis Cup loss to Hungary's Balazs Taroczy in the other semifinal, 6-3, 5-7, 6-3.

Junior High grid plans announced

Plans for the opening workouts for the Sikeston Junior High have been announced by the Junior High coaching staff.

Sikeston High School freshman football coach George Hale will welcome his ninth grade gridders to practice Monday, August 22, at 3:30.

Coach Hale reminds all his athletes that before they will be allowed to participate in the drills, a complete physical form and the insurance receipt (5.00, payable at the Junior High) must be turned in to him.

Eighth grade workouts will begin Thursday, August 25, eighth grade coach Mike Foster said. All physicals and insurance must be taken care of by then.

Taneycomo oxygen levels are up

JEFFERSON CITY – The good trout fishing at Lake Taneycomo near Branson is probably going to remain good over the next few months, a period when fishing has been depressed in past years because of low amounts of oxygen in the water.

State and federal water quality standards call for a minimum of six parts per million of dissolved oxygen, and for the first time since 1970 late-summer Taneycomo water will probably be able to meet the standard.

Reason for the presence of good oxygen levels is twofold. There has been little rain in the area this year. Consequently the amount of organic material washing into Table Rock Lake (which feeds Lake Taneycomo) has been reduced, and not as much oxygen is being consumed by the process of decay.

"The lake has remained colder this year," says Dr. James Whitley, chief of water quality investigations for the Department of Conservation. "The colder water slows down biological activity and the consumption of oxygen." Deep portions of the lake are at about 45 degrees; this time last year they were above 50 degrees.

Readings are now above six parts per million in the lake intake area, about five parts per million all the way down to 160 feet and 4.6 parts per million on the bottom of the lake, where the reading, at this time of year, is usually zero..

Low oxygen causes trout to slow their feeding and fishing falls off sharply. In the past oxygen levels in Taneycomo have dropped to less than three parts per million. The Conservation Department does not stock trout in Taneycomo when the oxygen levels drop below five parts per million.

In years past Lake Taneycomo has suffered until a natural mixing of high oxygen water from near the surface takes place, usually in December.

Indian coaches

Hoping they're ready for the challenges of the coming football season are these members of the coaching staff at Southeast Missouri State University. Southeast Missouri State opens pre-season practice Thursday (Aug. 11) with the first game set for Sept. 3 at home against Murray, Ky., State University. The coaches are (kneeling from left) John Gabrisch, receivers; and Tom McIntyre, graduate assistant; (standing, from left) Carl Gross, linemen and receivers; Jim Lohr, head coach; Bob Meyers, offensive coordinator; Ken Hargens, defensive coordinator; and Dennis Parker, offensive linemen. Not pictured is Dennis Helms, linebackers.

Littler leads PGA despite bogery

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Gene Littler finally turned human and made a bogey but the quiet, self-contained veteran stretched his lead to a commanding four strokes Saturday as frustration and anger struck down his challengers in the third round of the PGA National Championship.

Littler, whose machinelike precision had taken him through two rounds without a bogey, made three of them this bright, sunny day, and he had to work hard for a two-under-par 70 and a 206 total.

That's 10 shots under par for three rounds over the drought-damanged but still beautiful 6,806-yard Pebble Beach Golf Links and four in front of the game's most famed and feared performer—Jack Nicklaus.

The usually unemotional Nicklaus, who shot a two-under-par 70, cast an angered glance aloft—it was unclear whether toward the blue skies or a television tower—after making bogey on the 16th and angrily tossed his ball to caddy Angelo Argea following another bogey on the 17th.

He finished with a 210 total, six under par going to Sunday's final round of the title he wants so desperately — a record-matching fifth PGA crown and one that would end his string of frustrations at the hands of Tom Watson.

Herzog: 'We were lucky, lucky, lucky'

TORONTO AP - Whitey Herzog didn't hesitate to admit that his baseball club was fortunate to win.

"We were lucky to win that one - lucky, lucky, lucky," the Kansas City manager said Friday night after the Royals had taken a swinging 9-8 decision from Toronto Blue Jays in an American League game which featured 11 hits by both teams.

"That was a real game, a real adventure," Herzog said with a sigh of relief as the Royals stayed in the thick of the West Division title chase. They remain in fourth place, two games behind first-place Minnesota Twins.

Errors proved costly for the Blue Jays as the Royals collected three unearned runs on three errors-two in the fourth when Kansas City scored twice to tie the score 4-4 before 19,143 fans.

"We got six outs in that one inning and two runs," The Royals skipper said in explaining the Kansas City fourth. The visitors also made the most of their 11 hits off loser Dave Lemanczyk, 10-10, who went the distance for the Blue Jays. A two-run homer by Hal McRae keyed as three-run Royals uprising in the seventh, breaking up a 6-6 deadlock and providing Kansas City with the winning margin.

Marty Pattin, the second of four Kansas City pitchers, got credit for the win despite giving up four runs on five hits over four innings. His record is 5-2.

The Royals scored twice in the second, one of them unearned on a throwing error by centerfielder Bob Bailor. But the Jays got one back in the bottom of the inning as Doug Rader doubled and came home on Alan Ashby's single.

Toronto took a 4-2 lead in the third on a double, two singles, a walk, a sacrifice fly and a wild pitch by starting pitcher Andy Hassler.

But disaster struck the Blue Jays the following inning as Darryl Porter, who went three for five, singled and moved to third as Jays second baseman Steve Staggs couldn't handle the throw on a potential doubleplay ball off the bat of Amos Otis.

Cookie Rojas's groundout scored Porter and Otis was safe on a collision at the plate ad Ashby dropped Rader's throw off a grounder to third by Fred Patek.

The two teams each scored twice in the fifth with Dough Adult's 10th homer of the season providing one of the Toronto runs.

Dave McKay, who had not had a hit since mid-May until singling in Thursday's game with Minnesota, went three for four against the Royals and lined a vicious liner off Pattin the only time he was retired.

His sixth-inning single came with two out and the bases loaded and delivered both Toronto runs in the inning.

McKay was inserted into the lineup Thursday when regular shortstop Hector Torres left the team because of a death in his family. However, McKay's impressive play, both in the field and at the plate, has earned him the starting assignment for the time being, at least.

"I've got a sneaking suspicion he'll be in there tomorrow." Hartsfield chuckled.

Lohr uncertain about Indians

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- You might say the Jim Lohr is uncertain about his Southeast Missouri State University football team which opens pre-season practice with twice-a-day workouts on Thursday (Aug. 11).

In fact, you would have to say that because Lohr refuses to predict where his Indians will finish in this fall's Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association football race.

The rest of the coaches in the conference, in a recent poll, tapped the Indians for second place behind Northeast Missouri State University of Kirksville. But Lohr, participating in the same poll, refused to even rank the Tribe. He knows how he thinks the league teams would stack up if the Indians were not in the running. But, he maintains, he does not have any idea where the Indians will fit into the picture.

Lohr said his team has problems both offensively and defensively.

"I'm very concerned about our offense," he declared. "We lacked speed last year and have the same problem this year."

Southeast Missouri State's biggest loss offensively was in the receiving corps. Last year's top three receivers are gone, but the fourth receiver on the 1976 team, David Gross of Cape Girardeau, is returning. Gross, now a junior, caught 19 passes for 227 yards and four touchdowns last season.

Also returning for the Tribe offensively are quarterback Don Backfisch of Dexter, a senior who tossed for 1076 yeards in 1976, and the top running backs of last season, senior Jack Gokin of Kirkwood and senior Rick Schutt of Overland.

Defensively, according to Lohr, last year's squad was not very physical and that may be the situation again this season. In addition, the coach noted that Dan Wieser, "our best defensive player, signed a professional baseball contract with Kansas City." Wieser played safety.

Another Southeast Missouri State Footballer who had been expected to turn pro hasn't--yet. Kicker Mike Wood of Kirkwood was pegged as a high choice last season in the National Football League draft but then it was discovered that he was not at that time eligible to be drafted under NFL rules.

Wood attended summer school and is now eligible for the supplemental August draft, according to Lohr. The Indian mentor said he expects to know shortly whether Wood, who handles kick-offs, punts, and field goals, will return for his final year of collegiate eligibility.

Should he return, Wood stands to set a number of NCAA kicking records if his performance is naything like it has been the three previous season.

Southeast Missouri State will open its campaign at home in Houck Stadium on Sept. 3 The 8 p.m. game will be against Murray State University of Murray, Ky.

Mumphrey keys win Friday night

ST LOUIS AP - Jerry Mumphrey put on quite a show for one of his first teachers as well as his current instructor in the St. Louis Cardinals' 2-1 triumph over the Montreal Expos Friday night.

Mumphrey, hitless in three previous trips to the plate, smacked a double off Expos reliever Will McEnaney, 2-5, in the ninth that scored pinch-runner Rick Bosetti for the winning run.

George Kissel, the Cards' instructor at the minor league level, happened to be in town for some meetings. And he got an eyeful of Mumphrey, who showed again what he has learned from Kissell and Mo Mozzali, St. Louis' batting coach.

"George really worked me hard," Mumphrey said. "He'd have me out there hitting an hour before our games and an hour afterward. It was rough, but now I can appreciate what he did for me."

Cards Manager Vern Rapp had praise for Mumphrey, who's under extra pressure since the regular center fielder, Tony Scott, has been sidelined because of an injured left knee.

"Jerry's become a good clutch hitter since he has been playing everyday," Rapp said. "He's got the confidence now. Before in those tight situations, he wasn't aggressive enough."

With one out in the ninth, McEnaney walked Ted Simmons and pinch-hitter Mike Anderson. That left it up to Mumphrey, whose blow brought St. Louis only its third victory in 10 games with the Expos this season.

The victory went to Al Hrabosky, 5-4, who relieved Clay Carroll.

The Cardinals pushed across a run against veteran Stan Bahnsen in the first inning. Lou Brock opened with a single and then got steal No. 887, leaving him within five steals of Ty Cobb's alltime record of 892.

The Expos made it 1-1 in the seventh when Adre Dawson singled and scored on Tony Perez's third hit, a double. Montreal missed a chance to win it in the eighth as Larry Parrish opened with a single, but was thrown out at second on an aborted hit-and-run just before Chris Speier doubled. That brought on Hrabosky, who walked pinch-hitter Jose Morales intentionally, then got Pepe Frias on an infield pop-up and struck out Warren Cromartie.

Onofrio doesn't see Sooner runaway

ST. LOUIS AP - University of Missouri football coach Al Onofrio admits Oklahoma should be favored in the Big Eight race this season, but he's not ready to concede the championship to the Sooners just yet.

"There's more balance in the Big Eight this season than in the last four or five years," Onofrio said at a news luncheon here Friday. "The race will be very competitive and I don't think the champion will be undefeated.

Still, Onofrio concedes that Oklahoma will be the team to be reckoned with this season.

"You've got to go with Oklahoma as the favorite," said Onofrio, who is beginning his seventh year as the Tigers' head coach.

"After all, they've got nine starters back on offense and nine on defense and they finished last season with a lot of momentum. But I think they'll hear from the other seven."

With a few breaks, he said, the Bengals could come up with big surprises this year. Last year Mizzou would up with a 6-5 record that included stunning upsets over Southern California, Ohio State and Nebraska.

Onofrio said he's "excited" about the coming season. He calls his pass receivers. Joe Stewart and Leo Lewis, "two of the best in the country. And certainly the best team in the nation."

"I feel we'll have the same type of team offensively that we did last year - that we can run and pass effectively. And I think we'll have a better defense than last year."

The Missouri mentor also expects big things from quarterback Pete Woods. "He's known for his running, but he has demonstrated that he can also throw against top-notch competition. He'll put a lot of pressure on defenses."

With one out in the ninth, McEnaney walked Ted Simmons and pinch-hitter Mike Anderson. That left it up to Mumphrey, whose blow brought St. Louis only its third victory in 10 games with the Expos this season.

Indian coaches

Hoping they're ready for the challenges of the coming football season are these members of the coaching staff at Southeast Missouri State University. Southeast Missouri State opens pre-season practice Thursday (Aug. 11) with the first game set for Sept. 3 at home against Murray, Ky., State University. The coaches are (kneeling from left) John Gabrisch, receivers; and Tom McIntyre, graduate assistant; (standing, from left) Carl Gross, linemen and receivers; Jim Lohr, head coach; Bob Meyers, offensive coordinator; Ken Hargens, defensive coordinator; and Dennis Parker, offensive linemen. Not pictured is Dennis Helms, linebackers.

Littler leads PGA despite bogery

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Gene Littler finally turned human and made a bogey but the quiet, self-contained veteran stretched his lead to a commanding four strokes Saturday as frustration and anger struck down his challengers in the third round of the PGA National Championship.

Littler, whose machinelike precision had taken him through two rounds without a bogey, made three of them this bright, sunny day, and he had to work hard for a two-under-par 70 and a 206 total.

That's 10 shots under par for three rounds over the drought-damanged but still beautiful 6,806-yard Pebble Beach Golf Links and four in front of the game's most famed and feared performer—Jack Nicklaus.

The usually unemotional Nicklaus, who shot a two-under-par 70, cast an angered glance aloft—it was unclear whether toward the blue skies or a television tower—after making bogey on the 16th and angrily tossed his ball to caddy Angelo Argea following another bogey on the 17th.

He finished with a 210 total, six under par going to Sunday's final round of the title he wants so desperately — a record-matching fifth PGA crown and one that would end his string of frustrations at the hands of Tom Watson.

Herzog: 'We were lucky, lucky, lucky'

TORONTO AP - Whitey Herzog didn't hesitate to admit that his baseball club was fortunate to win.

"We were lucky to win that one - lucky, lucky, lucky," the Kansas City manager said Friday night after the Royals had taken a swinging 9-8 decision from Toronto Blue Jays in an American League game which featured 11 hits by both teams.

"That was a real game, a real adventure," Herzog said with a sigh of relief as the Royals stayed in the thick of the West Division title chase. They remain in fourth place, two games behind first-place Minnesota Twins.

Errors proved costly for the Blue Jays as the Royals collected three unearned runs on three errors-two in the fourth when Kansas City scored twice to tie the score 4-4 before 19,143 fans.

"We got six outs in that one inning and two runs," The Royals skipper said in explaining the Kansas City fourth. The visitors also made the most of their 11 hits off loser Dave Lemanczyk, 10-10, who went the distance for the Blue Jays. A two-run homer by Hal McRae keyed as three-run Royals uprising in the seventh, breaking up a 6-6 deadlock and providing Kansas City with the winning margin.

Marty Pattin, the second of four Kansas City pitchers, got credit for the win despite giving up four runs on five hits over four innings. His record is 5-2.

The Royals scored twice in the second, one of them unearned on a throwing error by centerfielder Bob Bailor. But the Jays got one back in the bottom of the inning as Doug Rader doubled and came home on Alan Ashby's single.

Toronto took a 4-2 lead in the third on a double, two singles, a walk, a sacrifice fly and a wild pitch by starting pitcher Andy Hassler.

But disaster struck the Blue Jays the following inning as Darryl Porter, who went three for five, singled and moved to third as Jays second baseman Steve Staggs couldn't handle the throw on a potential doubleplay ball off the bat of Amos Otis.

Cookie Rojas's groundout scored Porter and Otis was safe on a collision at the plate ad Ashby dropped Rader's throw off a grounder to third by Fred Patek.

The two teams each scored twice in the fifth with Dough Adult's 10th homer of the season providing one of the Toronto runs.

Dave McKay, who had not had a hit since mid-May until singling in Thursday's game with Minnesota, went three for four against the Royals and lined a vicious liner off Pattin the only time he was retired.

His sixth-inning single came with two out and the bases loaded and delivered both Toronto runs in the inning.

McKay was inserted into the lineup Thursday when regular shortstop Hector Torres left the team because of a death in his family. However, McKay's impressive play, both in the field and at the plate, has earned him the starting assignment for the time being, at least.

"I've got a sneaking suspicion he'll be in there tomorrow." Hartsfield chuckled.

Lohr uncertain about Indians

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- You might say the Jim Lohr is uncertain about his Southeast Missouri State University football team which opens pre-season practice with twice-a-day workouts on Thursday (Aug. 11).

In fact, you would have to say that because Lohr refuses to predict where his Indians will finish in this fall's Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association football race.

The rest of the coaches in the conference, in a recent poll, tapped the Indians for second place behind Northeast Missouri State University of Kirksville. But Lohr, participating in the same poll, refused to even rank the Tribe. He knows how he thinks the league teams would stack up if the Indians were not in the running. Onofrio's main worry offensively is line depth, he said. Defensively, he is most excited about his line, which he said is the deepest in the last three of four years.

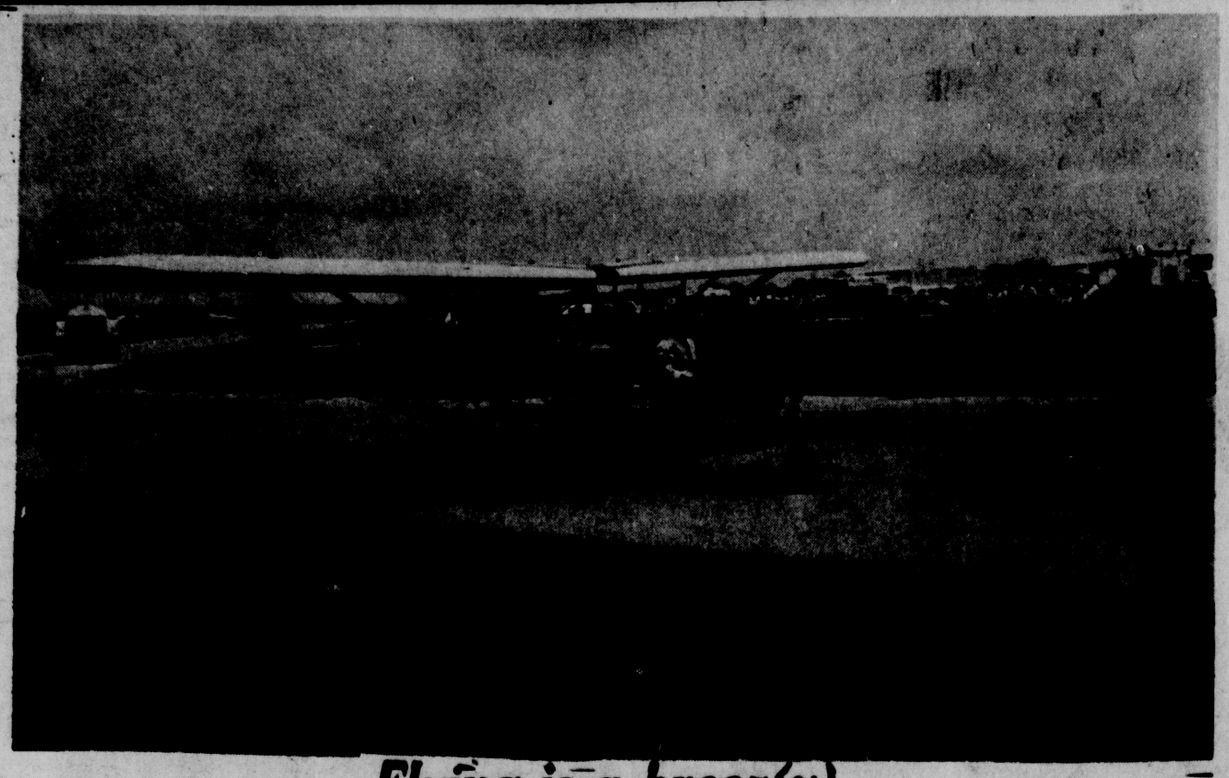
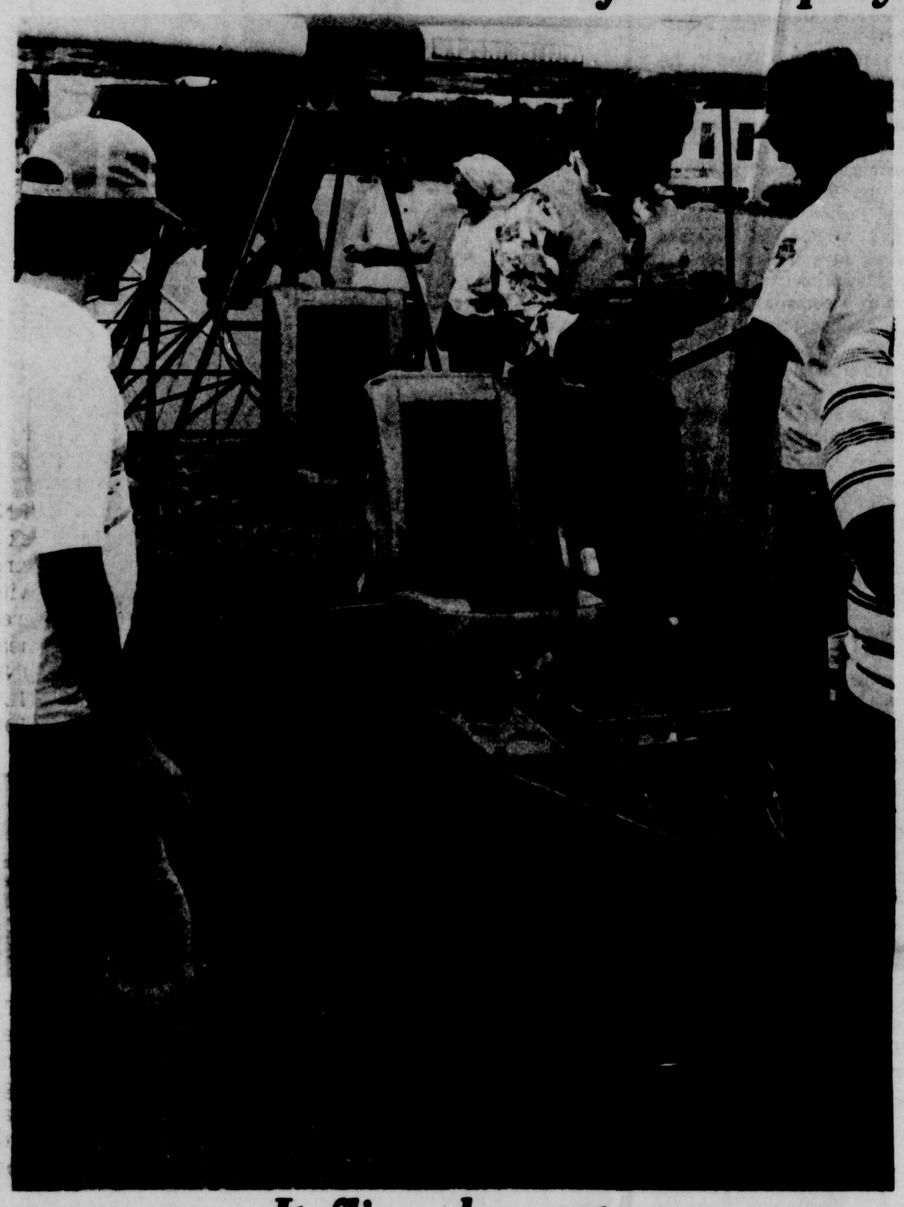
WWII aircraft on display



Flying is a breez(y)



It flies...honest

Old warplanes turn on a crowd

Story and photos by Ron Porter

"There's more romance in one of them than in any modern jet fighter," he said as the World War II warplane did a barrel roll over the crowd.

The man was talking about the P-51 Mustang putting on an aerobatic display above and the Corsair sitting on the ground, waiting its turn at the sky.

He was right of course. When Merl Gustafson and his Confederate Air Force landed the two planes Saturday morning, the early comers to the Sikeston Pilot's Association Aviation Day swarmed around the planes, touching, taking pictures, looking over the cockpit.

Here were airplanes that were real. They had seen real combat; not the touch a button and something explodes over the horizon type combat, but man-to-man warfare in tight twisting spirals in smoke and shrapnel-filled skies.

And to top it all off, the Corsair is a TV star, taking part in scenes of 'Baa Baa Black Sheep."

But the WWII aircraft were not the only things in the air. Vernon Willingham put on an aerobatic display in a homebuilt Renegade.

The plane did not look much bigger than a toy on a store shelf. When Willingham climbed into the plane, it looked more like he was putting on a pair of pants than a pair of wings.

Another plane that drew a sharp response was a homebuilt plane called a Breezy. It looks a lot like two chairs slung beneith a swing. In fact, that's just about all it is. No cabin walls, no windshield, just two seats, a wing and a motor.

"I can understand how the Wright Brothers felt," said the pilot, Carlton Hodges of Oran. "It flies beautifully."

The plane operates out of the Painton airport. It was a project of the Experimental Aircraft Association Chapter 483 of Southeast Missouri.

It was built from blueprints and licensed by the Federal Aviation Administration on April 15.

Members of the Cape Girardeau Parachute Club put on a jumping show and Radio Controled models were flown by RC buffs.

And of course, no air show is ever complete without the patron Beagle of the airways, Snoopy. Snoopy came prepared with a box of candy for any youngster who would shake his hand or kiss him on the nose.

Law school may not lead to Missouri Bar exam

Potential students at the new Missouri School of Law, a night school, 111 South Bemiston Avenue, Suite 104, Clayton, MO., were warned this week by the Better Business Bureau Serving Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois that a Bachelor of Law or Doctor of Jurisprudence degree awarded by the school does not mean that graduates of the school will be eligible to sit for the Missouri Bar examination.

The BBB is concerned because the school's advertising does not indicate this limitation, although the school's catalog does make the information available to potential students. The catalog reads in part:

"The Missouri School of Law has not been accredited by the American Bar Association... According to the regulations promulgated by the American Bar Association, no school can even apply for accreditation until classes have been in existence for one year. Because the law school has not held classes for this period, no application for accreditation can be submitted at this time..

"In order to take the bar examination in most states, the student must graduate from an accredited institution. Some states (most notably, California) do not require that the student receive his or her degree from an accredited institution, but rather that the graduate successfully pass the bar examination, just as is required for all other persons.

"The law school makes no representations that its program will be accredited by the American Bar Association before the student graduates, or at any time thereafter."

The school's catalog goes on to state that the majority of students are not interested in pursuing a career in private practice, but, rather, want the legal education to further them in existing careers.

It adds: "For those students who plan to change occupations and wish to engage in private practice, relocation to a state which allows them to sit for the bar examination will be necessary."

The BBB believes that many consumers could be misled by the law school's advertising. "Many consumers dimply do not take the time to read through brochures, contracts and guarantees," said James C. Schmitt, BB president.

Brokerage firm ordered to pay $599,186

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A brokerage firm has been ordered by a federal appellate court to pay $599,186 plus 6 per cent interest to the Alton Box Board Co. of Alton, Ill.

The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the firm, Goldman, Sachs and Co., acted improperly in 1970 when it sold to Alton Box Board commercial paper of the Penn Central Transportation Co.

Commercial paper consists of unsecured short-term notes that a company sells to raise temporary capital.

The appellate court's ruling Wednesday reverses an earlier U.S. District Court ruling that exonerated the brokerage firm in the transaction.

Alton Box Board purchased the Penn Central commercial paper through a St. Louis bank from Goldman, Sachs less than three months before the railroad filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws.

The railroad remained insolvent and Alton Box Board lost its investment. The Alton firm blamed Goldman, Sachs for not disclosing Penn Central's poor financial condition before the transaction.

In 1976, Judge H. Kenneth Wangelin of U.S. District Court ruled against the Alton firm, saying Goldman, Sachs made no affirmative misrepresentation to Alton Box Board. Wangelin said that both Alton Box Board and the bank had the means available to assess Penn Central's financial situation.

In reversing that decision, the three-judge appellate panel noted that Goldman, Sachs had confidential and undisclosed information about the railroad that it did not reveal to Alton Box Board.

The panel also held that on March 23, eight days before the sale to the Alton firm, Goldman, Sachs was informed by Penn Central of an impending heavy loss by the railroad for the first quarter of 1970.

Paint color can aid energy savings

PITTSBURGH -- Consumers needn't be scientists to use the medium of color for energy savings in the home. It's a matter of applying a basic knowledge of colors and their reflectance values.

So advises Bonnie Bender, manager of color marketing for PPG Industries, manufacturer of Pittsburgh Paints, She suggests that homeowners analyze and use colors inside and outside the home to take advantage of their inherent light reflectance or absorption.

"Begin by thinking in terms of dark and light, black and white, night and day, and be aware that neutrals and colors have the power to reflect or absorb light," says the PPG color expert, "Also, recognize that hue colors can affect room tempreratures and literally paint on warm or cool climates."

White and light tints of achromatic and hue colors provide the greatest reflectance value, says Mrs. Bender. These should be used to complement existing lighting and provide greater overall lighting efficiency.

Black and deep shades of all colors have an inherent quality of absorption and should be utilized to draw the sun's energies. As an example, use dark brown paint or stain on the house exterior to help draw in greater warmth for the interior.

"By including reflectance values in their initial color plans, homeowners can effect energy savings," notes Mrs. Bender. She suggests some energy-conserving and climatizing route to take in color planning a home:

--Plan colors around the natural light source provided by windows and around the activity of the room. If a room is primarily for daytime use and has only conventional size windows, white or light pastel tints provide good vision without the need, in daytime, for artificial light.

--If a room is designed for nighttime activity, such as a living or dining room, muted to deep colors may be desired. However, it is a good idea to paint ceilings white or in a light value of the wall color to reflect and diffuse lighting from both direct and indirect sources.

--Where there is little or no natural light – such as in basement stairwells and below-ground rooms-- a light or bright color such as light yellow Tulip by Pittsburgh Paints will most effectively capture any existing illumination and disperse it through the area.

In addition, if you use a high-gloss finish paint, it will add four per cent more reflectance than a flat, matte finish.

Homeowners are not expected to have color reflectance values at their fingertips – but paint dealers do. PPG has long supplie these percentages by way of color indexes that are available at its decorating centers and retail outlets.

Be aware of the climate character of color in effecting warmer or cooler temperatures in a room. Warm colors – reds, oranges and yellows – can paint on a climate of warmth and visually change the temperature of a room with a cool, northern exposure. Conversely, the cool range-- greens, blues and violets-- opposite effect. These colors are desirable for rooms that have an abundance of strong sunlight, as in southern or western exposures.

Just as color can affect the lighting quality of a room, it also can affect heat absorption, a guideline that should be considered in choosing exterior house colors. Since white and light pastels are the best reflectors of sunlight and heat, they should be used for homes in predominately hot climates to help create cooler interiors. For homes in cold weather areas, deep colors absorb light and heat to help wrap a home in warmth and beauty.

Wetterau shows off Pacific store to 600 shareholders at meeting

When nearly 600 shareholders and employes drive 30 miles to attend an annual meeting on a rainswept morning, there has to be something attractive about the company involved.

In this case, Wetterau Inc., I-St. Louis-based wholesale grocer with 40 years of successive earnings growth, did offer some special attractions. It was the largest group ever to attend a Wetterau annual meeting.

First, it gave shareholders an opportunity to preview the largest independently owned, Wetterau-designed and supplied IGA supermarket, just being opened Tuesday afternoon in Pacific, Mo. For the Schneider-family of Pacific, it was a chance to show how an independent grocer can compete and succeed against the giant food chains. The first Schneider store in 1950 was 800 square feet and represented an investment of $1900; the newest; 27,400 square feet and an investment, including land and building, of $2,000,000!

Another probable attraction was the fact that just one week ago, Chairman and President Ted C. Wetterau had reported the company's earnings for the first quarter had declined to 15 cents per share, compared to a 39 cents per share net in the first quarter of last year.

A sudden drop in earnings is not in the Wetterau tradition. The main reason was a writeoff resulting from the sale of 16 of Wetterau's Mohr Value discount department stores to Wal-Mart Stores, Inc.

Shareholders were told that additional indirect costs and resultant loss of intercompany sales would also produce "flat" or possibly even below last year's level of earning s for the second quarter too. And because of these factors, "it is unlikely we will achieve another record year in earnings, " said Ted Wetterau.

Funds realized in the sale of the discount department store operations will be employed in "important acquisitions", which Wetterau declined to indentify except to say they would be in the wholesale food field, rack-shop operations and extensions of the company's highly profitable and growing bakery business."

Wetterau Inc., headquartered in Hazlewood, has had a fairy-tale growth. Sales rose from $2.26 million to $914 million in the past 11 years. Earnings have risen steadily for 40 years!

Emphasizing that this growth cycle has not ended, Wetterau told shareholders that the company's decision to take its losses by selling off its discount department store business now is because "we feel our funds can be more profitably applied in other operations." And Wetterau has proven that what it knows best is the food service business.

As further evidence of its faith in the future, the board of directors voted a quarterly divident of 17½ cents per share, payable Sept. 15 to holders of record Sept. 1. The company had raised its quarterly dividend from 15 to 17½ cents as of June 15, and had declared a stock dividend of four per cent per share, payable August 5.

Then came the announcement that probably brought most of the shareholders to the annual meeting. Every shareholder was to pick up a large box of IGA products as they left the new Schneider store. Shareholders remembered that just two years ago, when the company held its annual meeting in a miniature store used for demonstration and training purposes in Hazelwood, each was invited to fill a shopping cart with IGA-brand goodies.

Another highlight of the meeting was the introduction of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Schneider, founder of the Pacific, Mo. IGA store business, and four of their five children who now are partners in the business. Robert L. Schneider, eldest of the sons and acting as spokesman, credited Wetterau's strong support as the major factor for their success.

"In November 1968 when a store we then owned was destroyed by fire, Wetterau people were here even before the embers had cooled and we were able to open up a new store in just three weeks," he said.

Wetterau said he is often asked how independently owned food stores can compete profitably against giant chains.

"You find the answer in the personal dedication shown here by the Schneiders and their employes," he said (The store provides jobs for a about 100 full and part time employes).

Another factor is that Wetterau offers the independents all the services used by the giants, including computer control of inventories and the latest merchandising techniques. The computerized equipment in this sotre, for example, costs almost $100,000 a company official estimated.

Wetterau said there are 9,100 individual food and drink products, including banks of frozen foods, plus a bakery and delicatessen in the store. There also are some hidden wonders that shoppers never see, such as environmental controls that utilize spillover cooling from around freezer and cooler cases to help keep the store cool in summer, and recirculate the waste heat generated by refrigeration equipment in winter. So efficient is the latter that no heating is required for the store until the temperature outside drops below freezing.

The store's computer system even has built-in safeguards against a heavy loss from a robbery. Anytime the cash in a checkout register reaches a level beyond that programmed, the machine won't function until the excess cash is removed.

Steer clear of costly auto repair fraud

By James L. Sullivan,
Director
Missouri Department of Consumer Affairs

If you're among the many car owners in this country who don't know the difference between a valve and a voltage regulator, you might be easy prey for an unscrupulous automobile repairman. Americans waste billions of dollars each year on shoddy and unnecessary auto repairs. In fact, auto-related problems are the number one source of complaints received by the Missouri Department of Consumer Affairs.

Unquestionably, part of the problem is outright fraud. While most auto mechanics are reputable, too many are not. Some mechanics or repair shop operators have been known to mislead customers and misrepresent their car problems. Examples of unneeded and unreasonably expensive repair work are not uncommon.

Another problem is incompetence. That is, some auto repairmen are simply incapable of doing the job right. The result: shoddy repair work at your expense.

However, apart from the countless examples of auto repair fraud and incompetence in this country, consumers themselves deserve some blame for their own dissatisfaction. Many car owners are totally ignorant of what goes on underneath their car's hood, and have only the slightest notion of "what makes a car go." And, many people are incapable of even describing their car problem to a mechanic when something goes wrong.

Your best protection against incompetent or uncrupulous mechanics is to know as much as possible about your car. At the very least, you should acquaint yourself with the owner's manual to learn about your car's normal maintenance requirements. And, read your car warranty so you know which repairs are covered. Following regular maintenance as outlined in the owner's manual may prevent future problems from arising.

Finding a mechanic or repair shop that will treat you and your car right may not be easy, but it's not impossible. As with any service, reputation is very important. News of a good service station probably travels fast, so ask your friends, neighbors and co-workers to recommend a shop they've been satisfied with. And, ask the Better Business Bureau in you area if there have been any complaints against a particular shop.

It's important to choose a repair shop best suited to your needs. For example, if your car is under warranty, you should have it serviced at an authorized dealer of your car's make. Dealers' service departments also do non-warranty work, and they are generally well-equipped and employ factory-trained mechanics. As a result, they usually cost more than many independent garages or the gas station down the street. On the other hand, gas stations, chain or discount store service departments and independent garages are generally capable of performing most repairs. And, many small, less advertised shops may do a job as well as a larger operation; maybe even at a lower cost. Costs vary widely among shops, as well as service. So ask around, compare and find a shop that fits your needs and your budget.

It's a good idea to steer your car away from shops that advertise incredibly low prices for certain major repair jobs. For instance, a shop that advertises a complete brake job for $9.95 or a transmission overhaul for $17.50 may be trying to get you into their shop where other, more costly, repair work may be suggested.

Some additional tips: get estimates from several repair shops and have the estimates put in writing; be cautious of allowing non-warranty repairs; if you leave your car at a repair shop, leave your telephone number and tell the mechanic to call you before making any repairs which will cost more than the original estimate; always be specific when describing your car's problems to a mechanic or service manager; find out if a shop guarantees its work and ask if the shop will return any replaced parts to you, get all promises in writing; consider enrolling in a basic auto repair course to learn more about your car. You may find that you can save money by doing some minor repair work at home.

If you have a complaint against a repair shop, contact the owner or service manager and voice your dissatisfaction. If that doesn't help, contact the Missouri Consumer Information Center within the Department of Consumer Affairs, Box 1157, Jefferson City, Missouri 65101.

Big K reports operating results for first half 1978

NASHVILLE -- Kuhn's Big K Stores Corp. (AMEX: KBK), a leading regional discount department store chain headquartered here, Monday reported operating results for the second quarter and first six months of its 1978 fiscal year.

Jack W. Kuhn, chairman and chief executive officer, and Gus D. Kuhn, president , announced the results at the regular quarterly Directors' meeting, during which the Board declared a cash dividend of 3 ¾ cents per share. The dividend is payable September 2, 1977 to shareholders of record August 19,1977.

For the second quarter ending July 29, 1977, sales reached $58,325,269,an increase of 11 per cent over the $52,545,019 recorded in a comparable period ending July 31, 1976. Net earnings for the three months just ended amounted to $791,000, or $.31 per share, compared to $959,000, or $.37 per share for the corresponding quarter a year ago.

In the first six months of its 1978 fiscal year, Kuhn's-Big K Stores Corp. had sales of $107,929,285, a gain of 10.5 per cent over the $97,677,777 achieved in a comparable period of the prior year. Net earnings for the six months ending July 29, 1977 were $1,166,000, or $.44 per share, down slightly from $1,372,000, or $.52 per share for the corresponding period a year earlier.

"While our sales increases for the first six months of fiscal 1978 rose at a satisfactory level," Jack W. Kuhn said, "our net earnings were affected by more than $.12 per share because of an increase in our reserve for possible LIFO adjustments brought about by an anticipation of a higher rate of inflation for the full year."

Law school may not lead to Missouri Bar exam

Potential students at the new Missouri School of Law, a night school, 111 South Bemiston Avenue, Suite 104, Clayton, MO., were warned this week by the Better Business Bureau Serving Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois that a Bachelor of Law or Doctor of Jurisprudence degree awarded by the school does not mean that graduates of the school will be eligible to sit for the Missouri Bar examination.

The BBB is concerned because the school's advertising does not indicate this limitation, although the school's catalog does make the information available to potential students. The catalog reads in part:

"The Missouri School of Law has not been accredited by the American Bar Association... According to the regulations promulgated by the American Bar Association, no school can even apply for accreditation until classes have been in existence for one year. Because the law school has not held classes for this period, no application for accreditation can be submitted at this time..

"In order to take the bar examination in most states, the student must graduate from an accredited institution. Some states (most notably, California) do not require that the student receive his or her degree from an accredited institution, but rather that the graduate successfully pass the bar examination, just as is required for all other persons.

"The law school makes no representations that its program will be accredited by the American Bar Association before the student graduates, or at any time thereafter."

The school's catalog goes on to state that the majority of students are not interested in pursuing a career in private practice, but, rather, want the legal education to further them in existing careers.

It adds: "For those students who plan to change occupations and wish to engage in private practice, relocation to a state which allows them to sit for the bar examination will be necessary."

The BBB believes that many consumers could be misled by the law school's advertising. "Many consumers dimply do not take the time to read through brochures, contracts and guarantees," said James C. Schmitt, BB president.

Brokerage firm ordered to pay $599,186

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A brokerage firm has been ordered by a federal appellate court to pay $599,186 plus 6 per cent interest to the Alton Box Board Co. of Alton, Ill.

The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the firm, Goldman, Sachs and Co., acted improperly in 1970 when it sold to Alton Box Board commercial paper of the Penn Central Transportation Co.

Commercial paper consists of unsecured short-term notes that a company sells to raise temporary capital.

The appellate court's ruling Wednesday reverses an earlier U.S. District Court ruling that exonerated the brokerage firm in the transaction.

Alton Box Board purchased the Penn Central commercial paper through a St. Louis bank from Goldman, Sachs less than three months before the railroad filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws.

The railroad remained insolvent and Alton Box Board lost its investment. The Alton firm blamed Goldman, Sachs for not disclosing Penn Central's poor financial condition before the transaction.

In 1976, Judge H. Kenneth Wangelin of U.S. District Court ruled against the Alton firm, saying Goldman, Sachs made no affirmative misrepresentation to Alton Box Board. Wangelin said that both Alton Box Board and the bank had the means available to assess Penn Central's financial situation.

In reversing that decision, the three-judge appellate panel noted that Goldman, Sachs had confidential and undisclosed information about the railroad that it did not reveal to Alton Box Board.

The panel also held that on March 23, eight days before the sale to the Alton firm, Goldman, Sachs was informed by Penn Central of an impending heavy loss by the railroad for the first quarter of 1970.

Many car owners are totally ignorant of what goes on underneath their car's hood, and have only the slightest notion of "what makes a car go." And, many people are incapable of even describing their car problem to a mechanic when something goes wrong.

Your best protection against incompetent or uncrupulous mechanics is to know as much as possible about your car. At the very least, you should acquaint yourself with the owner's manual to learn about your car's normal maintenance requirements. And, read your car warranty so you know which repairs are covered. Following regular maintenance as outlined in the owner's manual may prevent future problems from arising.

Finding a mechanic or repair shop that will treat you and your car right may not be easy, but it's not impossible. As with any service, reputation is very important. News of a good service station probably travels fast, so ask your friends, neighbors and co-workers to recommend a shop they've been satisfied with. And, ask the Better Business Bureau in you area if there have been any complaints against a particular shop.

It's important to choose a repair shop best suited to your needs. For example, if your car is under warranty, you should have it serviced at an authorized dealer of your car's make. Dealers' service departments also do non-warranty work, and they are generally well-equipped and employ factory-trained mechanics. As a result, they usually cost more than many independent garages or the gas station down the street. On the other hand, gas stations, chain or discount store service departments and independent garages are generally capable of performing most repairs. And, many small, less advertised shops may do a job as well as a larger operation; maybe even at a lower cost. Costs vary widely among shops, as well as service. So ask around, compare and find a shop that fits your needs and your budget.

It's a good idea to steer your car away from shops that advertise incredibly low prices for certain major repair jobs. For instance, a shop that advertises a complete brake job for $9.95 or a transmission overhaul for $17.50 may be trying to get you into their shop where other, more costly, repair work may be suggested.

Some additional tips: get estimates from several repair shops and have the estimates put in writing; be cautious of allowing non-warranty repairs; if you leave your car at a repair shop, leave your telephone number and tell the mechanic to call you before making any repairs which will cost more than the original estimate; always be specific when describing your car's problems to a mechanic or service manager; find out if a shop guarantees its work and ask if the shop will return any replaced parts to you, get all promises in writing; consider enrolling in a basic auto repair course to learn more about your car. You may find that you can save money by doing some minor repair work at home.

If you have a complaint against a repair shop, contact the owner or service manager and voice your dissatisfaction. If that doesn't help, contact the Missouri Consumer Information Center within the Department of Consumer Affairs, Box 1157, Jefferson City, Missouri 65101.

Big K reports operating results for first half 1978

NASHVILLE -- Kuhn's Big K Stores Corp. (AMEX: KBK), a leading regional discount department store chain headquartered here, Monday reported operating results for the second quarter and first six months of its 1978 fiscal year.

Jack W. Kuhn, chairman and chief executive officer, and Gus D. Kuhn, president , announced the results at the regular quarterly Directors' meeting, during which the Board declared a cash dividend of 3 ¾ cents per share. The dividend is payable September 2, 1977 to shareholders of record August 19,1977.

For the second quarter ending July 29, 1977, sales reached $58,325,269,an increase of 11 per cent over the $52,545,019 recorded in a comparable period ending July 31, 1976. Net earnings for the three months just ended amounted to $791,000, or $.31 per share, compared to $959,000, or $.37 per share for the corresponding quarter a year ago.

In the first six months of its 1978 fiscal year, Kuhn's-Big K Stores Corp. had sales of $107,929,285, a gain of 10.5 per cent over the $97,677,777 achieved in a comparable period of the prior year. Net earnings for the six months ending July 29, 1977 were $1,166,000, or $.44 per share, down slightly from $1,372,000, or $.52 per share for the corresponding period a year earlier.

"While our sales increases for the first six months of fiscal 1978 rose at a satisfactory level," Jack W. Kuhn said, "our net earnings were affected by more than $.12 per share because of an increase in our reserve for possible LIFO adjustments brought about by an anticipation of a higher rate of inflation for the full year."

Marriott hotels add Tan-Tar-A Resort

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- Marriott Corporation reported recently it has completed plans to acquire the Tan-Tar-A Golf and Tennis Resort on The Lake of the Ozarks in Camden County, Missouri. Located 170 miles southwest of St. Louis, Tan-Tar-A is one of the most popular vacation destinations in the mid-West.

Marriott will also continue to offer rental arrangements for property owners in Tan-Tar-A Estates -- a 50-acre residential development comprised of 170 luxury homes adjacent to the resort.

Marriott said the company expects to improve on the resort's already outstanding occupancy record. He also noted that Tan-Tar-A will become Marriott's third property in Missouri, where airport hotels have been opened in St. Louis and Kansas City with the past five years.

Situated on 74 acres with extensive lake frontage, Tan-Tar-A offers complete recreational facilities including a golf course, golf pro shop, six outdoor and three indoor tennis courts, indoor ice skating rink, eight bowling lanes, four swimming pools (one indoor), fishing, water skiing, motor boats, sailing, excursion cruises, skiing and ski lodge, game room, health club, exercise room, Putt-Putt golf course and horseback riding. BLACKMAIL INSURANCE

Almost four years after the start of the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo, the federal government finally has begun to fill its strategic oil reserve, designed to insure the nation against any future embargo.

While the move should have been made long ago, it is still good news. Every barrel of oil that this country places in its storage program makes it that much better prepared to resist economic or political blackmail by the oil exporters.

The program got under way with 412,000 barrels of crude pumped into a salt mine near Lake Charles, La. More salt domes, which do not allow oil to seep out, will be filled along the Gulf Coast and elsewhere in the country.

Current plans call for 250 million barrels in storage by the end of 1978, 500 million in 1980 and one billion by 1985. The latter figure equals about one-half a year's supply of oil imports and would permit the U. S. economy to withstand a quite lengthy embargo.

And because the country soon will be in position to cope with an embargo or supply interruption, this makes such an occurrence less likely. In short, Washington is on the way to regaining control over its own diplomacy and will not have to be so deferential to the oil cartelists in the Mideast and elsewhere.

Because the country is in the process of defusing the embargo threat doesn't mean, however, that it is solving its energy crisis. It still is sending abroad more than $40 billion a year to pay for cartel-priced imported crude.

This hemorrhage, which weakens the economy, will be slowed only when domestic oil production is increased. Unfortunately, the Carter administration insists on keeping crude oil under a complicated system of price controls and refuses to offer adequate incentives to expand supplies.

A MENTAL HEALTH PROBLEM

MARTHA'S VINEYARD-- My good friend Prof. Heinrich Applebaum has just done a sociological study on how private beaches affect the average American's vacation. He did it under a grant from the "Life Is Unfair Foundation."

Applebaum's study came to some startling conclusions.

"You would think," he told me, "That people who own their own beaches would be twice as happy as those who don't."

"That certainly figures," I said.

"Well, it's not true. My interviews indicate that those who have no rights to a private beach are three and a half times happier than those who do."

I was certainly surprised.

He said, "It appears that those who don't own beach front property believe the ocean is public and they have the right to use any beach they want to, even if it's marked 'Private.' " In fact, they prefer to use a private beach more than they do a public beach because not only are private beaches nicer but it drives the owners up the wall."

"I should think so. A person with a private beach has paid through the nose for it and he doesn't want just anybody using it. There are still such things as property rights in this country."

"Public bathers don't believe this," Applebaum said. "They feel that a beach is a beach is a beach, and if they can get away with using a private beach rather than a public one, their day is made. This is particularly true of nude bathers who will walk miles across dunes, sand and rocks to camp on a piece of property that is off limits to them."

"That's terrible."

"It's worse than that. I discovered in my studies that as the summer goes by the owners of private beaches start suffering severe mental problems, including depression, paranoia and hysteria. Very few of them can cope with strangers using their beaches. At the end of the summer they are psychological wrecks."

"How so?" I asked.

"Well, they get up in the morning, and the first thing they do is go down to their beach to see if anyone is on it. The thing about private beaches is people use them not only for sunbathing in the daytime, but also at night for other things. If they find their beach has been used at night, it drives the owners crazy. 'Get off my beach!' they scream at the people wrapped in their blankets.

"Then the beachowners go back to their houses to have breakfast. After breakfast they go back to the beach to see who is on it. If no one has arrived yet, they go into town to buy the papers and shop for groceries. But they are very ill at ease because all the time they're away they keep wondering if anyone is on their sand.

"When they return from town, they immediately go back to the beach to check it out. They sit on a sand dune waiting for the invaders. Some people send their children down to stand guard, and at the first sign of an unauthorized bather the children sound the alarm and everyone goes down to the beach to drive the trespassers off. If the sunbathers refuse to move, they have to go back to the house to call the police. This can kill two or three hours."

"It doesn't sound like much fun for the beachowners," I said.

"It isn't. They can't accept lunch dates or go fishing or sailing because they believe as soon as they go someone will walk on their property."

"A person could develop a complex after a while.' "

"Most of them do," Applebaum said. "They have nightmares, hallucinations and crying jags. They start talking to themselves. And in some cases they even plot murder. If these people don't get treatment, they can become a danger to society."

"Then on the basis of your study you're recommending that people who own waterfront property seek psychiatric help as soon as the summer is over."

"It's essential," Applebaum said. "A person who owns a private beach at a summer resort is a walking time bomb that could go off at any moment."

"I'm sorry but he's in conference with his mandatory retirement party."

Protection From Offshore Drilling
From The Boston Globe

During the Nixon and Ford Administrations the Federal Government repeatedly turned a deaf ear to coastal states seeking increased environmental protection in the granting of offshore drilling rights. Now, the Carter Administration is listening. The laudable new attitude in Washington provides coastal states with both an opportunityy to affect federal policy and an obligation to get their own coastal protection progams in shape.

The latest evidence of the Administration's willingness to listen to the stateys is the welcome news that, primarily at the urging of Massachusetts, the Federal Outer Continental Shelf Advisory Board had recommended adoption of a series of new offshore drilling regulations.

They would give the Interior Secretary power to halt envinromentally damanging drilling operations; would require environmental assessments not just before leasing but in the crucial period between actual exploration and drilling, when the full potential of offshore sites can be evaluated; and would require that any future changes in offshore regulations be submitted to affected states before they are published.

But no matter how willing the Federal Government is to cooperate, much of the power to channel the opportunities and limit the risks of offshore drilling resides with state and local governments.

Massachusett's first priority is to develop a strong, workable coastal- zone management plan. The development of a plan approved by the Federal Government will give the state authority to block and even veto plans of oil companies that conflict with its provisions. A draft of the plan is scheduled to be unveiled in August. The Current Timetable calls for final approval next February.

In light of the federal intention to lease drilling rights on the Georges Bank in November, any delay in the plan's approval could leave the state with little power to control initial offshore exploration. Yet, the greatest impact from the offshore operation will come not in the exploratoryy stage but if and when substantial petroleum reserves are discovered. Thus, some initial delay will be acceptable if it ensures that the state has a sound plan both to protect its envoronment and to channel any onshore development arising from drilling operations where it is most needed.

Even with a tough state plan, however, control of any development resulting from offshore drilling will ultimately rest with local communities. If substantial reserves are discovered on the Georges Bank, development will come quickly -- and when the reserves are depleted, the economic activity will decline rapidlyy. Any coastal community not prepared to grapple with the resulting pressures is courting danger.

One state official said the other day coastal communities that have already experienced major developments are in pretty good shape. Smaller, rural communities along the coast, he said are the ones lacking the necessary planning and zoning tools to control development. "It seems," he said, "You have to be burned first before you learn."

All the federal co-operation and state planning imanginable will be to little avail if communities cannot learn first -- and soon.

PEOPLE ARE LIKE THAT

A friend stopped by to return some books one morning and found me sobbing into a kitchen towel. Late for class as usual, I'd been rushing to clear away the breakfast dishes and had smashed a carafe of coffee on the linoleum. It was during a difficult transition period in my life when very little was going right, and the carafe incident seemed to bring it all to a head. I blurted out my despair while my friend mopped up the floor and offered assistance. "I could use a fat bank account, an A on my term paper, a full-time maid, a car that doesn't break down, and a healthy family," I sobbed, "but what I really need is some hope."

I rushed off to class, but when I got home that afternoon, the kitchen was immaculate and the other rooms had been dusted, vacuumed, and tidied. And, all through the house, on tables, in cupboards, sticking out of books and cushions, were little pieces of paper printed with the word HOPE. My friend must have spent hours, because those "Hopeful" little pieces popped out at me from all kinds of unlikely places, lifting my spirits for weeks.

AN EFFECTIVE DETERRENT
From The Boston Globe

One small piece of the fragile structure of the balance of fear that separates mankind from nuclear holocaust has crumbled. The Connecticut State Preparedness Office has ordered local Civil Defense officials to inspect, and possibly discard, 7000 tons of "survival biscuits" that have been stored in fallout shelters for the last 15 years.

Now, on the surface it may seem that the inspection is well-advised. In the best of circumstances -- let alone under the worst imaginable conditions, during a nuclear war -- life in a fallout shelter isn't a particularly attractive prospect. And the though of consuming 15-year-old biscuits, originally stockpiled during the Berlin crisis, hardly improves the situation.

The notion that the public might be forced by circumstances to consume such fare during a nuclear attack seems downright subversive. By now, they've probably hardened into literal jawbreakers that could destroy any possibility of verbal communications among those who tried to chew them. Furhter, anyone who managed to actually get one down would probably be rendered unable to aid in anyy military activities.

On further reflection, it seems there may well be considerable merit in retaining the biscuits, which the Pentagon judged to have "out lived their usefulness" and which a Connecticut official declared may not even be suitable for livestock. In fact, maybe Connecticut ought to volunteer to spread its rather ample stock of aged biscuits around the world.

In an age when military men are talking about neutron bombs and cruise missiles, MIRVs and 12As, ICBMs and Tridents,the prospect of subsiting on 15-year-old biscuits may prove the only effective deterrent to nuclear war.

We go along with that. Nixon, Agnew, Patty Hearst, are all prime examples of how one can evade a prison sentence if one has enough money or power.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Labor's Godfather:
Meany, at 83, remaking his cabinet for sweeping political and unionizing drives

WASHINGTON — At least one tough, razor-tongued, new national labor chief has told AFL-CIO president George Meany to get off his butt, refurbish labor's image or "get the hell out of office."

That ultimatum came from the 52-year-old Grand Lodge president of the million-member International Assn. of Machinists -- Bill "Winpy" Winpisinger, who has given some Presidents of the U.S. the same advice.

But the white-haired Meany -- 83 years old on Aug. 16 -- isn't taking it from Winpisinger or anyone else. Instead he's going to the Shrine of the Sacred Heart here on Labor Day. There at the invitation of his good friend and mentor Archbishop William Cardinal Baum, Meany will preach a homily on the role of American labor, the working people in this land.

That morning sermon will be delivered exactly one week after he will have opened the late summer AFL-CIO Executive Council session here. Unless the Lord intervenes the 83-year-old chief of chiefs will preside over a political war agenda which, in effect, will be the opening barrage to force Congress to give labor the laws with which to launch a vast unionizing campaign not solely against the J. P. Stevens Co., but against the entire non-union industrialism of the sunbelt.

This should wipe out the know-nothing impression that Meany and his heir apparent, Lane Kirkland, are conservatives. They aren't. Those who say so haven't analyzed their speeches, their strategy, their politics, their final beyond-the-horizons goals.

For example, there wouldn't have been a successful Cesar Chavez and his United Farm Workers if not for Meany and some 10 million AFL-CIO dollars. Thus, despite other allies, Chavez couldn't have made good his revolution in the field.

The national minimum wage would have hovered around 90 cents an hour. The militants inside the federal bureaucracy wouldn't have gotten all that political pork. Thousands of Democrats in the Congress, in state capitals and city halls would never have made it.

So at the Executive Council high command session Meany and his 34 colleagues will be calling in their IOUs. They will push for a minimum wage formula which will hit $3.37 an hour in two or three years. They'll demand instant support for their labor law reform. They'll assail corporate America. They'll plan strategy for a wide counteroffensive against the open shop (non-union) forces now sweeping mightily through the land.

And while the assaults on the nation's most famous, long-lived, 83-year-old curmudgeon continue, Meany will be remaking his high council. At least 12 of them are lame ducks or planning to retire or seriously ill.

Insiders have no doubt that Meany already has chosen replacements for the departing dozen and for one vacancy caused by the Postal Union's Francis Filbey's death.

And these insiders have changed their minds on Meany's alleged impending retirement. Virtually every council member is certain that Meany and Kirkland will stand for reelection as a team at the Dec. 8 national convention in Los Angeles.

They're a tough team. They aren't divorced from realism. They know that as they get older the rank and file is getting younger. Soon the average AFL-CIO member's age will be in the low 40s. And many of the 14.5 million AFL-CIOers were not born when Meany first took national AFL office back in 1939.

Further the leadership of some powerful unions these days is in the hands of men about 40 years Meany's junior. In federal union circles, for example.

Meany smokes cigars, not pot. As the teenagers say, he's not spaced out. He's not hallucinating. He's doing what comes naturally.

And that is to be known by the enemies he keeps.

And that "enemy," that opposition will be "the South." There are vast areas and jurisdictions open for unionizing. None of the other labor giants, throughout history, have made it. Meany intends to break through. Already he has given personal support to his special $900,000 "labor law reform" task force. Already it has innovated the massive national social action coalition strategem -- weaving together labor, women's groups, civil rights organizations, blacks and Chicanos, et al.

Already the sprawling 109-union AFL-CIO ffederation is pruning itself for stronger campaigns. For example the Retail Clerks Int'l. Assn. is planning a merger with three other unions which would make it a 1.2-million-member giant. The maritime labor front is consolidating.

So it goes. Always with political clout -- money, manpower, imaginative electioneering techniques right on the streets of tens of thousands of precinctes.

So Meany will be remaking his 35-man cabinet. With younger men. And the veterans are with thim. There isn't any court conspiracy to drive the old man out.

As always, George Meawny, as long as he's physically healthy, will be going for the political jugular whether it is in the White House or the Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers or the corporate suites of America.

Thus far Meany has outlived most of his successors.

'Phantom Taxes' Add To Utilities' Profits

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — The giant utility companies have learned how to make a profit out of paying taxes. They simply add the taxes to the bills they send their customers. But the utilities charge their customers for the full federal taxes before the exemptions are deducted. Then the companies keep the savings instead of returning the money to the consumers.

Thus, the utilities collect millions earmarked for taxes, which ends up not in the Treasury but in corporate accounts. This must be one of the most impressive cases on record of having your cake and eating it, too.

The losers, of course, are the consumers who wind up paying not only higher-than-ever gas, electric and telephone bills but also the utilities' tax bills -- including phantom taxes the companies stash away.

These phantom taxes may become a national issue. Already, some state utility commissions are fighting to return the unpaid taxes to the customers who paid them. This move is encountering massive resistance, however, from the big utilities.

The issue, of course, has two sides. The Congressional Research Service has summed up the public case in an unpublished memorandum, which asks simply: "Should the utility companies collect from the ratepayer what amounts to phantom taxes which are never paid?"

The case for the utilities, on the other hand, has been summarized by the greatest utility of them all, American Telephone and Telegraph Co., which claims its customers get their money back in the form of lower rates. The tax breaks, argues ATT, enables the Bell System to keep rates down.

Sources familiar with the utilities' bookkeeping, however, tell us the consumers get little benefit from the tax savings. They put up the full tax money, but the utilities pay only part taxes. The consumers would be better off getting the balance back, our sources say, than relying upon the utilities to reward them with lower rates.

We aren't talking about chicken feed. According to the latest Federal Power Commission figures, electric utilities alone had accumulated $1.8 billion in deferred tax credits at the end of 1975. The Environmental Action Foundation, which keeps a close watch on electric utilities, estimates they retained at least $7 billion in unpaid federal taxes from 1964 to 1975.

A staff memo, prepared for Rep. Charles Vanik, D.-Ohio, charges the utilities persuaded Congress through "a heavy lobbying effort" to permit them to "normalise" or "internalise" their tax savings -- that is, to keep the money rather than passing it back to the ratepayers.

Most state utility commissions have gone along with this loophole and have permitted the companies to keep the extra money they collected from their customers for taxes. But a few commissions, notably California, have made moves to require the utilities to return the tax savings.

This can be done through a bookkeeping procedure called flow-through accounting. But the telephone utilities, of course, prefer the "normalization" method.

An ATT official explained that the Bell companies keep the tax savings in a reserve, which is used for modernization and other investment. But eventually, it must be paid back since it is only a deferred tax break, he said.

The memo from the Congressional Research Service, responding to this argument, points out: "The present rates are worth more in an economic sense than the future tax payments. Also, for a utility which is constantly growing and continuing to build new plants, it is not clear that future tax payments over match current revenues, as deferrals continue to increase each year."

But under the tax laws as they are now written, an Internal Revenue spokesman told us, the savings from tax credits aren't intended to go back to the consumers. Instead, the savings must be kept in reserve and used for investments. The tax breaks can't be treated as income, which they would be if they were returned to the ratepayers, the spokesman said. As Internal Revenue interprets the law, tax savings also can't be used to reduce rates.

There is a good chance this whole tax brouhaha will end up before the Supreme Court.

OIL SQUEEZE: Months before he took office, Jimmy Carter quietly tried to persuade the oil sheikhdoms not to raise their oil prices. As president-elect, he told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that a new round of oil increases would have a devastating impact on the world economy.

Sen. Charles Percy, R.-Ill., offered to convey Carter's position to the ambassadors of the oil-producing countries. Carter agreed to let the senator pass on his private statements.

Percy contacted nearly 20 ambassadors. But he reported back in a confidential memo that "we are in a weak position" until the United States adopts a tough energy conservation program.

His timing was also unfortunate. He contacted the ambassadors at the same time U.S. Steel announced a price increase. Complained Percy in his confidential memo: "The U.S. Steel price increase at this time doesn't help."

BLACKMAIL INSURANCE

Almost four years after the start of the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo, the federal government finally has begun to fill its strategic oil reserve, designed to insure the nation against any future embargo.

While the move should have been made long ago, it is still good news. Every barrel of oil that this country places in its storage program makes it that much better prepared to resist economic or political blackmail by the oil exporters.

The program got under way with 412,000 barrels of crude pumped into a salt mine near Lake Charles, La. More salt domes, which do not allow oil to seep out, will be filled along the Gulf Coast and elsewhere in the country.

Current plans call for 250 million barrels in storage by the end of 1978, 500 million in 1980 and one billion by 1985. The latter figure equals about one-half a year's supply of oil imports and would permit the U. S. economy to withstand a quite lengthy embargo.

And because the country soon will be in position to cope with an embargo or supply interruption, this makes such an occurrence less likely. In short, Washington is on the way to regaining control over its own diplomacy and will not have to be so deferential to the oil cartelists in the Mideast and elsewhere.

Because the country is in the process of defusing the embargo threat doesn't mean, however, that it is solving its energy crisis. It still is sending abroad more than $40 billion a year to pay for cartel-priced imported crude.

This hemorrhage, which weakens the economy, will be slowed only when domestic oil production is increased. Unfortunately, the Carter administration insists on keeping crude oil under a complicated system of price controls and refuses to offer adequate incentives to expand supplies.

Protection From Offshore Drilling
From The Boston Globe

During the Nixon and Ford Administrations the Federal Government repeatedly turned a deaf ear to coastal states seeking increased environmental protection in the granting of offshore drilling rights. Now, the Carter Administration is listening. The laudable new attitude in Washington provides coastal states with both an opportunityy to affect federal policy and an obligation to get their own coastal protection progams in shape.

The latest evidence of the Administration's willingness to listen to the stateys is the welcome news that, primarily at the urging of Massachusetts, the Federal Outer Continental Shelf Advisory Board had recommended adoption of a series of new offshore drilling regulations.

They would give the Interior Secretary power to halt envinromentally damanging drilling operations; would require environmental assessments not just before leasing but in the crucial period between actual exploration and drilling, when the full potential of offshore sites can be evaluated; and would require that any future changes in offshore regulations be submitted to affected states before they are published.

But no matter how willing the Federal Government is to cooperate, much of the power to channel the opportunities and limit the risks of offshore drilling resides with state and local governments.

Massachusett's first priority is to develop a strong, workable coastal- zone management plan. The development of a plan approved by the Federal Government will give the state authority to block and even veto plans of oil companies that conflict with its provisions. A draft of the plan is scheduled to be unveiled in August. The Current Timetable calls for final approval next February.

In light of the federal intention to lease drilling rights on the Georges Bank in November, any delay in the plan's approval could leave the state with little power to control initial offshore exploration. Yet, the greatest impact from the offshore operation will come not in the exploratoryy stage but if and when substantial petroleum reserves are discovered. Thus, some initial delay will be acceptable if it ensures that the state has a sound plan both to protect its envoronment and to channel any onshore development arising from drilling operations where it is most needed.

Even with a tough state plan, however, control of any development resulting from offshore drilling will ultimately rest with local communities. If substantial reserves are discovered on the Georges Bank, development will come quickly -- and when the reserves are depleted, the economic activity will decline rapidlyy. Any coastal community not prepared to grapple with the resulting pressures is courting danger.

One state official said the other day coastal communities that have already experienced major developments are in pretty good shape. Smaller, rural communities along the coast, he said are the ones lacking the necessary planning and zoning tools to control development. "It seems," he said, "You have to be burned first before you learn."

All the federal co-operation and state planning imaginable will be to little avail if communities cannot learn first -- and soon.

PEOPLE ARE LIKE THAT

A friend stopped by to return some books one morning and found me sobbing into a kitchen towel. Late for class as usual, I'd been rushing to clear away the breakfast dishes and had smashed a carafe of coffee on the linoleum. It was during a difficult transition period in my life when very little was going right, and the carafe incident seemed to bring it all to a head. I blurted out my despair while my friend mopped up the floor and offered assistance. "I could use a fat bank account, an A on my term paper, a full-time maid, a car that doesn't break down, and a healthy family," I sobbed, "but what I really need is some hope."

I rushed off to class, but when I got home that afternoon, the kitchen was immaculate and the other rooms had been dusted, vacuumed, and tidied. And, all through the house, on tables, in cupboards, sticking out of books and cushions, were little pieces of paper printed with the word HOPE. My friend must have spent hours, because those "Hopeful" little pieces popped out at me from all kinds of unlikely places, lifting my spirits for weeks.

AN EFFECTIVE DETERRENT
From The Boston Globe

One small piece of the fragile structure of the balance of fear that separates mankind from nuclear holocaust has crumbled. The Connecticut State Preparedness Office has ordered local Civil Defense officials to inspect, and possibly discard, 7000 tons of "survival biscuits" that have been stored in fallout shelters for the last 15 years.

Now, on the surface it may seem that the inspection is well-advised. In the best of circumstances -- let alone under the worst imaginable conditions, during a nuclear war -- life in a fallout shelter isn't a particularly attractive prospect. And the though of consuming 15-year-old biscuits, originally stockpiled during the Berlin crisis, hardly improves the situation.

The notion that the public might be forced by circumstances to consume such fare during a nuclear attack seems downright subversive. By now, they've probably hardened into literal jawbreakers that could destroy any possibility of verbal communications among those who tried to chew them. Furhter, anyone who managed to actually get one down would probably be rendered unable to aid in anyy military activities.

On further reflection, it seems there may well be considerable merit in retaining the biscuits, which the Pentagon judged to have "out lived their usefulness" and which a Connecticut official declared may not even be suitable for livestock. In fact, maybe Connecticut ought to volunteer to spread its rather ample stock of aged biscuits around the world.

In an age when military men are talking about neutron bombs and cruise missiles, MIRVs and 12As, ICBMs and Tridents,the prospect of subsiting on 15-year-old biscuits may prove the only effective deterrent to nuclear war.

A MENTAL HEALTH PROBLEM

MARTHA'S VINEYARD-- My good friend Prof. Heinrich Applebaum has just done a sociological study on how private beaches affect the average American's vacation. He did it under a grant from the "Life Is Unfair Foundation."

Applebaum's study came to some startling conclusions.

"You would think," he told me, "That people who own their own beaches would be twice as happy as those who don't."

"That certainly figures," I said.

"Well, it's not true. My interviews indicate that those who have no rights to a private beach are three and a half times happier than those who do."

I was certainly surprised.

He said, "It appears that those who don't own beach front property believe the ocean is public and they have the right to use any beach they want to, even if it's marked 'Private.'" In fact, they prefer to use a private beach more than they do a public beach because not only are private beaches nicer but it drives the owners up the wall."

"I should think so. A person with a private beach has paid through the nose for it and he doesn't want just anybody using it. There are still such things as property rights in this country."

"Public bathers don't believe this," Applebaum said. "They feel that a beach is a beach is a beach, and if they can get away with using a private beach rather than a public one, their day is made. This is particularly true of nude bathers who will walk miles across dunes, sand and rocks to camp on a piece of property that is off limits to them."

"That's terrible."

"It's worse than that. I discovered in my studies that as the summer goes by the owners of private beaches start suffering severe mental problems, including depression, paranoia and hysteria. Very few of them can cope with strangers using their beaches. At the end of the summer they are psychological wrecks."

"How so?" I asked.

"Well, they get up in the morning, and the first thing they do is go down to their beach to see if anyone is on it. The thing about private beaches is people use them not only for sunbathing in the daytime, but also at night for other things. If they find their beach has been used at night, it drives the owners crazy. 'Get off my beach!' they scream at the people wrapped in their blankets.

"Then the beachowners go back to their houses to have breakfast. After breakfast they go back to the beach to see who is on it. If no one has arrived yet, they go into town to buy the papers and shop for groceries. But they are very ill at ease because all the time they're away they keep wondering if anyone is on their sand.

"When they return from town, they immediately go back to the beach to check it out. They sit on a sand dune waiting for the invaders. Some people send their children down to stand guard, and at the first sign of an unauthorized bather the children sound the alarm and everyone goes down to the beach to drive the trespassers off. If the sunbathers refuse to move, they have to go back to the house to call the police. This can kill two or three hours."

"It doesn't sound like much fun for the beachowners," I said.

"It isn't. They can't accept lunch dates or go fishing or sailing because they believe as soon as they go someone will walk on their property."

"A person could develop a complex after a while."

"Most of them do," Applebaum said. "They have nightmares, hallucinations and crying jags. They start talking to themselves. And in some cases they even plot murder. If these people don't get treatment, they can become a danger to society."

"Then on the basis of your study you're recommending that people who own waterfront property seek psychiatric help as soon as the summer is over."

"It's essential," Applebaum said. "A person who owns a private beach at a summer resort is a walking time bomb that could go off at any moment."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Labor's Godfather:
Meany, at 83, remaking his cabinet for sweeping political and unionizing drives

WASHINGTON — At least one tough, razor-tongued, new national labor chief has told AFL-CIO president George Meany to get off his butt, refurbish labor's image or "get the hell out of office."

That ultimatum came from the 52-year-old Grand Lodge president of the million-member International Assn. of Machinists -- Bill "Winpy" Winpisinger, who has given some Presidents of the U.S. the same advice.

But the white-haired Meany -- 83 years old on Aug. 16 -- isn't taking it from Winpisinger or anyone else. Instead he's going to the Shrine of the Sacred Heart here on Labor Day. There at the invitation of his good friend and mentor Archbishop William Cardinal Baum, Meany will preach a homily on the role of American labor, the working people in this land.

That morning sermon will be delivered exactly one week after he will have opened the late summer AFL-CIO Executive Council session here. Unless the Lord intervenes the 83-year-old chief of chiefs will preside over a political war agenda which, in effect, will be the opening barrage to force Congress to give labor the laws with which to launch a vast unionizing campaign not solely against the J. P. Stevens Co., but against the entire non-union industrialism of the sunbelt.

This should wipe out the know-nothing impression that Meany and his heir apparent, Lane Kirkland, are conservatives. They aren't. Those who say so haven't analyzed their speeches, their strategy, their politics, their final beyond-the-horizons goals.

For example, there wouldn't have been a successful Cesar Chavez and his United Farm Workers if not for Meany and some 10 million AFL-CIO dollars. Thus, despite other allies, Chavez couldn't have made good his revolution in the field.

The national minimum wage would have hovered around 90 cents an hour. The militants inside the federal bureaucracy wouldn't have gotten all that political pork. Thousands of Democrats in the Congress, in state capitals and city halls would never have made it.

So at the Executive Council high command session Meany and his 34 colleagues will be calling in their IOUs. They will push for a minimum wage formula which will hit $3.37 an hour in two or three years. They'll demand instant support for their labor law reform. They'll assail corporate America. They'll plan strategy for a wide counteroffensive against the open shop (non-union) forces now sweeping mightily through the land.

And while the assaults on the nation's most famous, long-lived, 83-year-old curmudgeon continue, Meany will be remaking his high council. At least 12 of them are lame ducks or planning to retire or seriously ill.

Insiders have no doubt that Meany already has chosen replacements for the departing dozen and for one vacancy caused by the Postal Union's Francis Filbey's death.

And these insiders have changed their minds on Meany's alleged impending retirement. Virtually every council member is certain that Meany and Kirkland will stand for reelection as a team at the Dec. 8 national convention in Los Angeles.

They're a tough team. They aren't divorced from realism. They know that as they get older the rank and file is getting younger. Soon the average AFL-CIO member's age will be in the low 40s. And many of the 14.5 million AFL-CIOers were not born when Meany first took national AFL office back in 1939.

Further the leadership of some powerful unions these days is in the hands of men about 40 years Meany's junior. In federal union circles, for example.

Meany smokes cigars, not pot. As the teenagers say, he's not spaced out. He's not hallucinating. He's doing what comes naturally.

And that is to be known by the enemies he keeps.

And that "enemy," that opposition will be "the South." There are vast areas and jurisdictions open for unionizing. None of the other labor giants, throughout history, have made it. Meany intends to break through. Already he has given personal support to his special $900,000 "labor law reform" task force. Already it has innovated the massive national social action coalition strategem -- weaving together labor, women's groups, civil rights organizations, blacks and Chicanos, et al.

Already the sprawling 109-union AFL-CIO ffederation is pruning itself for stronger campaigns. For example the Retail Clerks Int'l. Assn. is planning a merger with three other unions which would make it a 1.2-million-member giant. The maritime labor front is consolidating.

So it goes. Always with political clout -- money, manpower, imaginative electioneering techniques right on the streets of tens of thousands of precinctes.

So Meany will be remaking his 35-man cabinet. With younger men. And the veterans are with thim. There isn't any court conspiracy to drive the old man out.

As always, George Meawny, as long as he's physically healthy, will be going for the political jugular whether it is in the White House or the Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers or the corporate suites of America.

Thus far Meany has outlived most of his successors.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

'Phantom Taxes' Add To Utilities' Profits

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — The giant utility companies have learned how to make a profit out of paying taxes. They simply add the taxes to the bills they send their customers. But the utilities charge their customers for the full federal taxes before the exemptions are deducted. Then the companies keep the savings instead of returning the money to the consumers.

Thus, the utilities collect millions earmarked for taxes, which ends up not in the Treasury but in corporate accounts. This must be one of the most impressive cases on record of having your cake and eating it, too.

The losers, of course, are the consumers who wind up paying not only higher-than-ever gas, electric and telephone bills but also the utilities' tax bills – including phantom taxes the companies stash away.

Tomatoes for processing

Hard tomatoes look good

MALDEN -- A new agricultural "industry" -- tomatoes for processing - may take hold in Southeast Missouri, according to University of Missouri-Columbia horticulturists.

"We're putting ten years of research on a pilot, commercial scale to see if growing processing tomatoes is feasible here," said Vic Lambeth, UMC tomato breeder.

"Instead of tiny plots, we have about one acre with about 18,000 transplants and one half acre direct seeded.

"In smaller plots, we have 12 experimental lines now being considered for release. These are hard-type processing tomatoes best suited to mechanical harvesting."

Lambeth and Hank DiCarlo, horticulturist at the UMC Delta Center, sent samples of these tomatoes to the Bush laboratory at Blythevflle, Arkansas for quality evaluation as canning tomatoes.

Delta Superintendent Chuck Cromwell reports eight tons of the Chico III variety were picked July 26 and 27 and delivered to Winter Garden Freezers at Bells, Tennessee.

"The manager of the freezer plant was delighted with the quality of the one-fourth-inch diced, quick-frozen tomato chunks made from the Missouri grown tomatoes," he said.

Financial support for the UMC tomato research project came from the Blytheville, Arkansas, plant of Bush Brothers Canning Co., from M & H Produce Co. of Clarkton, Missouri, and from the UMC Delta Center.

M & H Produce Co. produces field peas for Bush Canning Co. as do other farmers in the Clarkton area. Many of these same farmers produce watermelons and cantaloupes.

"These vegetable producers are looking for alternate crops such as processing tomatoes," said Cromwell.

The grant money provided by Bush and M & H Produce is used by UMC to test tomato lines for suitability to mechanical harvesting and to test productivity on sandy soils like those on the Roge F. Rhodes Memorial Agricultural Research Farm at Clarkton where the research is being conducted.

"So far, I'd say our results are very encouraging," said Lambeth. "We've had a good stand this year, even with direct seeding (in contrast to transplanting).

"We're also learning more about irrigation on the sandy sol and trying to adapt cultural practices to the soil and climate of this area."

Peach crop is short after freeze and drought

Peaches are one of Missouri's major fruit crops. Orchards in the state produced 22.5 million pounds of peaches last year. This year, however, peach crop yields are much lower. "We're way short," says Bill Lambert; Campbell, Missouri, president peach Merchandising council. "We're going to run close to only 35 per cent (production)."

The drastic reduction in yield is attributed to several factors. Southeast Missouri, home of most of the state's peach orchards,suffered through the variable weather experienced across the nation. "The freeze in January killed all of our low ground peaches," Lambert says. "Some growers had peaches on flat land, and it just about wiped all of those out. Then to add to that, we had drought early. So we didn't get the size.', Harsh weather conditions also have affected the timing of the peach season. "We're early this year. Our latest peach will come off about the middle of August. Normally we start picking the first week of June and finish up by the first of September."

Missouri peaches are picked by hand. Harvesters carry half bushel bags, and they are paid according to the number of half bushels they turn in.

From the orchard, most peaches grown in Southeast Missouri are taken to the Missouri Fruit Growers' Exchange, Inc., in Campbell. At the "fruit exchange," a corporation formed by local growers in 1974, the peaches are washed and graded. They are placed in a hydrocooler where an ice cold waterbath removes fuzz and dirt and lowers the fruit's temperature by 50 degrees Fahrenheit, halting the ripening process. Peaches are then packed in cartes and placed in a cooler to await shipment.

Missouri peaches are sent to markets not only across the state but tacross the nation. "Early this year we started shipping to Chicago," Lambert says. "We ship to Detroit, and we send a lot into Texas. Naturally we fill the markets close before we go farther, but we have shipped into Old Mexico and into Canada."

Other states, in turn, send peaches to Missouri. "Before our peaches come off, you see more California peaches and some from Georgia and the Carolinas," says Lambert.

But which peaches are best? "Naturally, being from Missouri, I think the Missouri peach is best," Lambert says. "The farther you ship a peach, the greener you have to pick it. The longer you can leave it on the tree, the sweeter that peach is. And that's where we have the advantage over most states. We're centrally located, and we can ship a riper peach."

Farmland to build feed mills

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Farmland Industries, the nation's largest manufacturing and wholesale farm cooperative, announced it will build its 19th and 20th feed mills at Corson in the southeast corner of South Dakota and Centralia in north-central Missouri.

Both will have capacities of 70,000 tons of feed a year and 20,000 square-foot warehouses. Construction is scheduled to start within a few weeks and be completed in the spring of 1979.

Younglove Construction Co. of Sioux City, Iowa, was awarded the contract to build the mill at Corson, on a 14-acre site near the intersection of Interstate 90 and South Dakota 11.

Corson is eight miles east of Sioux Falls, S.D., near the point where South Dakota, Minnesota and Iowa adjoin. The feed mill will serve local cooperatives affiliated with Farmland in those states and in nearby Nebraska. Between 20 and 25 people were be employed in the production of livestock and poultry feeds.

The plant at Centralia also will employ 20 to 25 and will serve co-ops in north-central Missouri.

Grasshoppers troubling farmers

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Grasshoppers and the lack of efficient chemicals to control them are posing problems for farmers in northwestern Missouri and some other sections of the state.

One Buchanan County farmer said the grasshopper infestation in the counties around St. Joseph is the worst since the drought of the 1930s. He expressed the fear that next year could be even worse.

"I've been farming all my life and haven't seen anything this terrible since 1936," said William Marschel, who has a farm near St. Joseph. "We've got them pretty bad and we've been crop dusting to try to get rid of them."

"It doesn't seem to be doing very well for us," Marschel said. "The grasshoppers are just too big. We're about ready to give up controlling them this year. They've eaten 40 rows into the field and are still moving in farther."

Elbert Turner, the county's extension director, said damage so far has been rost on hay and pasture crops. "On corn and soybean crops they are concentrating on the edge rows where they have stripped many of the stalks," he said.

Cotton Council leader opposes new wage law

WASHINGTON, D.C., – A National Cotton Council leader recently testified that the indexing provision of a proposed minimum wage law could prove to be "the most inflationary action ever taken by the federal government."

Chauncey L. Denton, an Arkansas cotton producer and ginner, made the statement in an appearance before the Senate Human Resources Committee. The bill under consideration would raise the minimum wage to $2.65 an hour on Jan. 1, 1978, with automoatic adjustment to 52 per cent of the average hourly wage in manufacturing in 1979 and 53 per cent in 1980 and s succeeding years.

Denton said the indexing feature completely departs from the concept that ties remuneration to productivity.

"It's a dangerous precedent that can do nothing but force discharge of workers at the lowest salary levels and put into motion a continual inflationary spiral that through the years could wreak havoc on our economy," he stated.

Noting that cotton is a labor-intensive industry, the Council leader said the bill's provisions would have a significant impact on the cost of producing and marketing cotton and could prove particularly damaging to the fiber's competitive position in domestic and foreign markets.

He pointed out that cotton farms, gins, oil mills, and warehouses depend largely on unskilled workers who are not trained to seek gainful employment elsewhere.

"Their productivity in most instances is low and many would be replaced if the wage structure requires wages over and above this economic contribution," he added.

Denton emphasized that the Council supports the principle of fair labor standards but warned, "Standards that eliminate jobs for workers who haye the greatest need and least opportunity are counter-productive."

In addition, he said, "Standards that fuel inflation and create additional costs that must be borne by either producers, consumers, or both serve no good purpose and are not in the national interest."

The Council representative said he was not advocating minimum wage levels remain constant, but urged that any increase be evaluated as to its possible inflationary effects and its impact on the job market's structure and functions.

"Whatever benefits regular, incremental increases in the minimum wage through indexation might provide, they would be offset many, many times by the increased threat of perpetual, runaway inflation; the loss of jobs; and the compounding of employment-related social problems of our nation's youth," Denton concluded.

Protection for farmers pledged in water, strip mining disputes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus reiterated the administration's pledge to protect farmers and ranchers in disputes involving water rights and strip mining.

"It is not this administration's intent to solve an energy problem and create a food problem and fiber problem," Andrus said.

He also said President Carter believes small ranchers and farmers should have the right to protect their land from disruption by strip miners.

The secretary made his comments Tuesday at a news conference.

Unlike the East, where water is generally plentiful, the arid West carefully allocates its water, which is the key to economic and agricultural development. The demand for water in the West often exceeds the supply.

Currently, a review of federal water policy is being conducted, but it is not the intent of the administration to "preempt state or private water rights," Andrus said.

The development of energy resources in the West is expected to create a huge demand for water from utilities. But Andrus said ranchers and farmers will be protected to avoid losing water essential for production of crops.

He also declared that new regulations governing disposal of excess federal lands, to be issued next week, will require the owners to reside on the property if they want to retain federal water rights. The purpose of this regulation is to eliminate absentee owners and investment co trol, he said.

As for strip mining, Andrus said that Carter agrees that a private farmer or rancher should have the legal right to continue farming or ranching without having his land uprooted.

The conflict stems from the fact that across much of the West, the undergound mineral and mining rights are owned by the government. The government leases the underground rights to coal companies. The farmer or rancher generally owns surface rights. The strip mining bill signed last week requires mining companies to get the surface owner's consent before the land can be disturbed.

Tomatoes for processing

Hard tomatoes look good

MALDEN -- A new agricultural "industry" -- tomatoes for processing - may take hold in Southeast Missouri, according to University of Missouri-Columbia horticulturists.

"We're putting ten years of research on a pilot, commercial scale to see if growing processing tomatoes is feasible here," said Vic Lambeth, UMC tomato breeder.

"Instead of tiny plots, we have about one acre with about 18,000 transplants and one half acre direct seeded.

"In smaller plots, we have 12 experimental lines now being considered for release. These are hard-type processing tomatoes best suited to mechanical harvesting."

Lambeth and Hank DiCarlo, horticulturist at the UMC Delta Center, sent samples of these tomatoes to the Bush laboratory at Blythevflle, Arkansas for quality evaluation as canning tomatoes.

Delta Superintendent Chuck Cromwell reports eight tons of the Chico III variety were picked July 26 and 27 and delivered to Winter Garden Freezers at Bells, Tennessee.

"The manager of the freezer plant was delighted with the quality of the one-fourth-inch diced, quick-frozen tomato chunks made from the Missouri grown tomatoes," he said.

Financial support for the UMC tomato research project came from the Blytheville, Arkansas, plant of Bush Brothers Canning Co., from M & H Produce Co. of Clarkton, Missouri, and from the UMC Delta Center.

M & H Produce Co. produces field peas for Bush Canning Co. as do other farmers in the Clarkton area. Many of these same farmers produce watermelons and cantaloupes.

"These vegetable producers are looking for alternate crops such as processing tomatoes," said Cromwell.

The grant money provided by Bush and M & H Produce is used by UMC to test tomato lines for suitability to mechanical harvesting and to test productivity on sandy soils like those on the Roge F. Rhodes Memorial Agricultural Research Farm at Clarkton where the research is being conducted.

"So far, I'd say our results are very encouraging," said Lambeth. "We've had a good stand this year, even with direct seeding (in contrast to transplanting).

"We're also learning more about irrigation on the sandy sol and trying to adapt cultural practices to the soil and climate of this area."

BRIDGES, BELLS AND BATTERIES

NEW YORK (AP) — Door bells, flashlight batteries and the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge, the world's largest suspension bridge, all have something in common. They owe their existence to Andrew Wittman.

Wittman, a surveyor, is believed to be the first American to have made zinc metal. In 1845, he produced two ounces from ore discovered on a farm four miles south of Bethlehem, Pa. Now a mine, owned by Gulf & Western's New Jersey Zinc Company, the "farm" produces 2,000 tons of zinc ore each day.

Door bells and battery casings are made of rolled zinc, smelted from the mine. And the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge cables, which span New York Harbor, are protected against rust by 2,316 tons of zinc galvanizing.

Farmers may store grain in parking lots and streets

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota farmers and elevator operators, expecting bumper crops this year, are thinking of using parking lots and streets if they can't find enough storage bins to hold their grain.

"The stampede is on," said Bob Swanson of the Minnesota Agriculture Department. "We've never seen such a demand for grain bins. It's been heaviest in the Red River Valley so far, but it's spreading out."

Farmers have been heading to offices of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) seeking government loans to buy storage bins.

"In the Valley, we've got some counties that've had more than 500 applications already. Now it's starting in the southern part of the state," said Les Steeppel, an agricultre specialist with the USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

"It's too early to tell how much money we'll loan out for bins, but it probably will be a record," he said. "The demand is very, very strong."

Many suppliers already have run out of bins, Steeppel said, and don't expect to have any more until January or later.

Minnesotans are expected to harvest about 840 million bushels of grain this fall, and Steeppel estimated farmers can store 750 million to 800 million bushels, while elevators and warehouses can store another 375 million or so bushels.

However, Swanson said the storage facilities already are about 60 per cent full of grain from previous years.

In the small community of Spicer, in central Minnesota, the Green Lake Grain and Seed Co. will block off the parking lot at Green Lake bathing beach and pile its excess grain there, said company manager Gene Wenzel.

"It could be worse, " he said. "We could be starving.

"The problem is we get a glut of grain in a big hurry during the harvest, and we just can't handle it all that fast."

Wenzel said his elevator may add storage space, but not in time for this year's harvest.

In Grove City, a street may be barricaded to make room for the excess grain.

Swanson said poor grain prices—caused by excellent U.S. and world grain harvests—have caused the storage problem this year.

"The only way to survive these disastrous prices is to hold your grain off the market until the prices rise, if you can wait that long," Swanson said.

"How can you expect a farmer to sell his corn for $1.80 a bushel when it may have cost him $2.25 a bushel to produce?" he said.

Swanson said such a farmer growing 100 bushels of corn on 300 acres would stand to lose $13,500 by selling now.

However, Wenzel noted that the grain surplus was enabling the country to build up grain reserves.

"And you can bet we're going to need it before too long," he added. "People forget sometimes, but it's only been a few years since we had big crop failures in many areas of the world."

The United States motto, "In God We Trust," was not officially adopted by Congress until 1956, even though it originated during the Civil War as a slogan on coins.

Farm Roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The three major grain-exporting countries of the world would have to increase their production of crops at a rate of 4 per cent a year just to bridge the statistical gap between the food available in developing countries and what all people need, a food-oriented "think tank" says in a recent study.

The present long-term growth rate for grain production in the United States, Canada and Australia is about 2.5 per cent, the paper from the International Food Policy Research Institute says.

But the world-hunger scenarios are not that simple, Assistant Agriculture Secretary Dale E. Hathaway emphasized in a speech last week for agricultural economists meeting in California.

The paper, too, said such growth, which it called unlikely, would just be the starting point for getting the food where it's needed.

Hathaway came to his job of overseeing USDA's international and domestic commodities programs from the institute, where he was executive director. He "made a major contribution to the report" on world food consumption, according to the introduction.

Neither his speech nor the research paper pointed out one of the "on the other hand's" involved in keying production directly to consumption.

That's the fact that, late this week or early next week, the department will be announcing that it wants U.S. grain farmers to cut back not just growth but overall production next year of wheat and possibly feedgrains.

Producers' prices are too low to sustain profitable production, Hathaway noted.

Without the set-aside that Secretary Bob Bergland has been talking about since before he was sworn in, the taxpayers are liable to end up owning the excess, without much relief to either farmers or the hungry in other nations, USDA maintains.

It takes only a slight change in supply or price to push the undernourished out of reach of food, however, the institute noted.

Hathaway will be administering the set-aside program, which under pending farm legislation would impose substantial penalties for growers who don't cooperate. He also will administer the first official U.S. grain reserve the measure establishes.

The institute cites reserves as one of three policy changes necessary "to come to grips with the problem of inadequate food supplies and large numbers of underfed people in developing countries."

But its reserves would be on a worldwide basis — an approach advocated, without action, since the 1974 crunch between world food supplies and demand.

The second change is a better balance in developing nations' domestic policies, which tend to favor either farmers or consumers but not both. The third is protection, as those countries develop their agricultural machine, for small farmers and landless laborers.

The fact that the United States, through bumper harvests, now has a 1.2-billion-bushel wheat surplus and that world grain stocks have almost returned to the late-1960s level "makes it important to move toward establishing a global reserve before circumstances operate to dissipate them," the institute said.

Hathaway detailed an array of political complexities between nations and between different kinds of farmers — grain growers and livestock feeders, for example — that plague solutions to the world-hunger problem.

The problem is certain, he and the institute say.

Despite worldwide bumper harvests the last two years, about two-thirds of the people in "developing market economies," or up to 1.3 billion people, are classed as undernourished by the United Nations. That category takes in 40 per cent of those in Latin America, 55 per cent in North Africa and the Middle East and 70 per cent in low-income Asia and African countries south of the Sahara.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is ending its unusual program of buying frozen, boneless beef roasts exclusively for school lunches and other feeding activities. It's going to a combination of roasts and hamburger meat.

Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman said that the combination program will start next week with 38,000-pound lots. Twenty-five per cent of each unit must be roasts.

The ground beef must come from the chuck and round portions left after the roasts are cut from the carcass, although it may be supplemented by beef from any wholesale cuts.

The meat must come from carcasses graded either Choice or Prime, the top two grades.

With bids still out on the final segment of the roast program that began June 14, USDA has spent about $2.15 million for more than 1.86 million pounds.

Ms. Foreman, a designation she prefers, said that the new program should encourage broader participation in the bidding by meatpackers and processors, because most portions of a carcass could be used.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Production of fresh-market vegetables and melons in the major producing states during the spring is estimated at 60.7 million hundredweight, a 3 per cent increase over 1976, the Crop Reporting Board says.

The 14 vegetables alone, however, have come in at about the same volume, 42.3 million hundredweight, according to the report. A preliminary forecast for the summer put vegetables and melons at 64.6 million hundredweight, up from 64.3 million last summer. Major states' harvests account for about 90 per cent of the total.

School immunization ad campaign criticized

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A legislative committee Wednesday charged the state Division of Health has exceeded its authority in a media campaign that emphasizes immunizations are necessary before a child can enter school in Missouri.

However, a division spokesman said the failure to note that exceptions were permitted was the fault of the news media.

Rep. Richard DeCoster, chairman of the Joint Administrative Rules Committee, said he had been told a copy for public service commercials which ran on a Kansas City television station came from the health division. Similar campaigns are being conducted all over the state.

The copy made no note that certain exceptions were permitted.

DeCoster, a Canton Democrat, said the director of the division's immunization programs, James Donaho, said his department had encouraged the campaign.

Donaho was out of town Wednesday, and the agency's media consultant, Jerry Giffen, said all material leaving the department made note of the exceptions.

They are: (1) a family's physician can certify the immunization is hazardous to the student's health, (2) the family doctor can certify an immunization program has begun, but has not yet been completed, (3) any parent of a child can object to the shots and no reason for the objection has to be stated, and (4) a family which cannot afford to hire a private physician can ask the school district to arrange for the shots.

Giffen said forms for all the exceptions are available from any local health department.

She also said at the present time a student not taking one of the exceptions must receive immunization for polio, diphtheria, measles and rubella, usually called the three-day measles.

Laura Keene, producer of "Our American Cousins" at the Ford Theater in Washington the night that Lincoln was assassinated, was the first woman to be a manager in the American theater.

BRIDGES, BELLS AND BATTERIES

NEW YORK (AP) — Door bells, flashlight batteries and the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge, the world's largest suspension bridge, all have something in common. They owe their existence to Andrew Wittman.

Wittman, a surveyor, is believed to be the first American to have made zinc metal. In 1845, he produced two ounces from ore discovered on a farm four miles south of Bethlehem, Pa. Now a mine, owned by Gulf & Western's New Jersey Zinc Company, the "farm" produces 2,000 tons of zinc ore each day.

Door bells and battery casings are made of rolled zinc, smelted from the mine. And the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge cables, which span New York Harbor, are protected against rust by 2,316 tons of zinc galvanizing.

Farmers may store grain in parking lots and streets

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota farmers and elevator operators, expecting bumper crops this year, are thinking of using parking lots and streets if they can't find enough storage bins to hold their grain.

"The stampede is on," said Bob Swanson of the Minnesota Agriculture Department. "We've never seen such a demand for grain bins. It's been heaviest in the Red River Valley so far, but it's spreading out."

Farmers have been heading to offices of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) seeking government loans to buy storage bins.

"In the Valley, we've got some counties that've had more than 500 applications already. Now it's starting in the southern part of the state," said Les Steeppel, an agricultre specialist with the USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

"It's too early to tell how much money we'll loan out for bins, but it probably will be a record," he said. "The demand is very, very strong."

Many suppliers already have run out of bins, Steeppel said, and don't expect to have any more until January or later.

Minnesotans are expected to harvest about 840 million bushels of grain this fall, and Steeppel estimated farmers can store 750 million to 800 million bushels, while elevators and warehouses can store another 375 million or so bushels.

However, Swanson said the storage facilities already are about 60 per cent full of grain from previous years.

In the small community of Spicer, in central Minnesota, the Green Lake Grain and Seed Co. will block off the parking lot at Green Lake bathing beach and pile its excess grain there, said company manager Gene Wenzel.

"It could be worse," he said. "We could be starving.

"The problem is we get a glut of grain in a big hurry during the harvest, and we just can't handle it all that fast."

Wenzel said his elevator may add storage space, but not in time for this year's harvest.

In Grove City, a street may be barricaded to make room for the excess grain.

Swanson said poor grain prices—caused by excellent U.S. and world grain harvests—have caused the storage problem this year.

"The only way to survive these disastrous prices is to hold your grain off the market until the prices rise, if you can wait that long," Swanson said.

"How can you expect a farmer to sell his corn for $1.80 a bushel when it may have cost him $2.25 a bushel to produce?" he said.

Swanson said such a farmer growing 100 bushels of corn on 300 acres would stand to lose $13,500 by selling now.

However, Wenzel noted that the grain surplus was enabling the country to build up grain reserves.

"And you can bet we're going to need it before too long," he added. "People forget sometimes, but it's only been a few years since we had big crop failures in many areas of the world."

The United States motto, "In God We Trust," was not officially adopted by Congress until 1956, even though it originated during the Civil War as a slogan on coins.

Farm Roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The three major grain-exporting countries of the world would have to increase their production of crops at a rate of 4 per cent a year just to bridge the statistical gap between the food available in developing countries and what all people need, a food-oriented "think tank" says in a recent study.

The present long-term growth rate for grain production in the United States, Canada and Australia is about 2.5 per cent, the paper from the International Food Policy Research Institute says.

But the world-hunger scenarios are not that simple, Assistant Agriculture Secretary Dale E. Hathaway emphasized in a speech last week for agricultural economists meeting in California.

The paper, too, said such growth, which it called unlikely, would just be the starting point for getting the food where it's needed.

Hathaway came to his job of overseeing USDA's international and domestic commodities programs from the institute, where he was executive director. He "made a major contribution to the report" on world food consumption, according to the introduction.

Neither his speech nor the research paper pointed out one of the "on the other hand's" involved in keying production directly to consumption.

That's the fact that, late this week or early next week, the department will be announcing that it wants U.S. grain farmers to cut back not just growth but overall production next year of wheat and possibly feedgrains.

Producers' prices are too low to sustain profitable production, Hathaway noted.

Without the set-aside that Secretary Bob Bergland has been talking about since before he was sworn in, the taxpayers are liable to end up owning the excess, without much relief to either farmers or the hungry in other nations, USDA maintains.

It takes only a slight change in supply or price to push the undernourished out of reach of food, however, the institute noted.

Hathaway will be administering the set-aside program, which under pending farm legislation would impose substantial penalties for growers who don't cooperate. He also will administer the first official U.S. grain reserve the measure establishes.

The institute cites reserves as one of three policy changes necessary "to come to grips with the problem of inadequate food supplies and large numbers of underfed people in developing countries."

But its reserves would be on a worldwide basis — an approach advocated, without action, since the 1974 crunch between world food supplies and demand.

The second change is a better balance in developing nations' domestic policies, which tend to favor either farmers or consumers but not both. The third is protection, as those countries develop their agricultural machine, for small farmers and landless laborers.

The fact that the United States, through bumper harvests, now has a 1.2-billion-bushel wheat surplus and that world grain stocks have almost returned to the late-1960s level "makes it important to move toward establishing a global reserve before circumstances operate to dissipate them," the institute said.

Hathaway detailed an array of political complexities between nations and between different kinds of farmers — grain growers and livestock feeders, for example — that plague solutions to the world-hunger problem.

The problem is certain, he and the institute say.

Despite worldwide bumper harvests the last two years, about two-thirds of the people in "developing market economies," or up to 1.3 billion people, are classed as undernourished by the United Nations. That category takes in 40 per cent of those in Latin America, 55 per cent in North Africa and the Middle East and 70 per cent in low-income Asia and African countries south of the Sahara.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is ending its unusual program of buying frozen, boneless beef roasts exclusively for school lunches and other feeding activities. It's going to a combination of roasts and hamburger meat.

Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman said that the combination program will start next week with 38,000-pound lots. Twenty-five per cent of each unit must be roasts.

The ground beef must come from the chuck and round portions left after the roasts are cut from the carcass, although it may be supplemented by beef from any wholesale cuts.

The meat must come from carcasses graded either Choice or Prime, the top two grades.

With bids still out on the final segment of the roast program that began June 14, USDA has spent about $2.15 million for more than 1.86 million pounds.

Ms. Foreman, a designation she prefers, said that the new program should encourage broader participation in the bidding by meatpackers and processors, because most portions of a carcass could be used.

SILVA -- Twenty-one adult Scouters from Southeast Missouri and Southern Illinois, including three women, participated in Leadership Development Wood Badge Course NC-336 during the week of July 29-Aug 6 at Camp Lewallen here.

Wood Badge Course NC-336 was the first such course over to be held in the Southeast Missouri Council Area and was conducted jointly by both the SEMO Boy Scout Council and the OKAW Valley Council in Belleville Ill.

The Course is staffed by volunteer Scouters who have attended a similiar course and have received theri Wood Badge Beads, signifying completion of their commitment, with no cost for the training staff. This keeps the cost to candidates attending the course at $70, which provides food and the necessary printed material given to the candidates.

Course Director for NC-336 Claude Stone Jr. of Chaffee, said the Course just competed was successful and the SeMo Council is planning to conduct another Wood Badge Course sometime in late July or early August of 1978,

The objective of the training course is to develop more effective leaders in Scouting.

The candidates develop leadership qualities and practice leadership techniques while learning to work effectively with boys and others.

After completing the course the candidates should know how to use the methods of Scouting to best meet Scouting's purpose, how to encourage the personal growth of each individual boy, how to establish an effective relationship with boys and adults and how to plan and carryout with boys, a program that will meet the needs of boys in their personal growth.

In 1948 Wood Badge training was inaugurated in the United States, providing mainly training in the Scouting skills. Leadership development was introduced into Wood Badge experimentally in 1967 in selected councils and since the early 1970's has been used in all Wood Badge courses.

Competencies of leadership development are all presented on the concept of methodology of learning which consists of: Guided discovery, teaching learning, application and evaluation.

By using methodology of learning the candidate will become a manager of learning instead of the traditional instructor or teacher to Scouts and adults.

In departing from the teacher-student approach and using the manager of learning method, the learner is tested (guided discovery); he is taught, by presentation, personal coaching, movies etc., (teaching-learning), he practices, (application); and is checked (evaluation).

The candidates gain knowledge, develop skills and learn to practice until they do their best.

The 11 competencies of leadership presented in the Wood Badge Course include: getting and giving information, knowing and using the resources of the Group, learning the characteristics and needs of the group, representing the group, evaluating needs, planning, controlling the group, counseling, sharing leadership, setting the example and becoming a manager of learning.

Models of business management techniques used through the course include those of: Blake and Mouton; Lewin; Maslow; McGregor; Rogers and Schmidt and Tannenbaum.

All the candidates live and operate as a patrol, with the thought that everyone learns best by doing.

Scouting skills are learned during the week as they are needed from within the patrols, using the patrol members as resources for learning.

Once during the course, all the patrols come together and conduct a Showando, where each candidate present his particular skills and the other candidates watch the demostration and then have a chance practice the same skill.

After the week of training, candidates must do from six months to two years extra work; also work on a self-determined contract that prescribes specific applications and projects of varying lengths, subject to review, reinforcement, and operational evaluation in terms of end results. Each candidate is assigned a coach counselor to help him during this period.

Occupations of the staff and candidates, all volunteers, vary greatly. These including minister, school teacher, international marketing manager, lawyer, salespersons, meteorologist, military personnel, railroad worker and housewife.

Participating in this first Wood Badge Course in Southeast Missouri were: Candidates in Biting Beaver Patrol: Lendell Clements, Fredericktown; W. Rod Corley, Kennett; Robert M. Crammer, Jackson, Patricia L. Renard, Cape Girardeau; A. Wayne McDonald, Menard, Ill.; and Joseph Kensey Russell, Cape Girardeau.

Screaming Eagle Patrol: James A. Light, Scott Air Force Bass Ill.,; Ronald Montgomery, Fredericktown; Dan Odell, Cape Girardeau; Dianna Perry, Oran; and James A. Renard, Cape Girardeau.

Night Owl Patrol: Jerry Beckner, Cape Girardeau; Donna Clements, Fredericktown; Dennis F. Davies, Poplar Bluff; R. Finley Maddox, Cape Girardeau, and Fred L. Roberts Jr., Scott AFB Ill.

Bee Stung Bear Patrol: Kenny Allen, Caruthersville; John L. Braswell, Kennett; John L. Essner, Cape Girardeau; David E. Shell, Dexter; and Earl R. Stratton Cape Girardeau.

Ask the Pastor

Is money the root of all evil?

By Rev. E. Pembleton

Dear Pastor Pembleton: Doesn't the Bible call money "the root of all evil?" I have been wondering about that for a long time.-Ruby.

Dear Ruby: The Bible does not call money "the root of all evil." Ecclesiastes 7:12 speaks of money as a "defence." It is a good thing in the hands of a good man. I Timothy 6:10 says that "the LOVE of money is the ROOT of all evil."

Few people can have money and not love it. It is not a sin to be rich; however, nor does the Bible condemn riches honestly acquired. Greed for gold is an evil thing. It is against this spirit that the Bible speaks.

Dear Pastor Pembleton: My husband is a sinner, and I cannot get him to change.Nothing I say seems to help him. What do you suggest?-Elsie.

Dear Elsie: In Matthew 5:16, the Bible says: "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven,"

I suggest that you do less talking and concentrate more on faithful living. Men are more impressed by deeds than words. The poet says: "I'd rather see a sermon than hear one any day. I'd rather one would walk with me than merely tell the way."

Dear Pastor Pembleton: If it is a sin to have many wives, what about Abraham and Solomon?-Robert.

Dear Robert: Abraham had so much trouble that he left one wife in the desert. As for Solomon he is a bit unusual in that he had so many. But these are his own words: "I hated my life," Ecclesiastes 2:17.

The polygamist can find little comfort in the unfortunate experiences of these two men.

Dear Pastor Pembleton: I understand that you are keeping a city-wide evangelistic meeting in Hayti; and you are also giving free blood-pressure check and help to the needy. It would be nice if you could conduct such a meeting in Sikeston. Is that possible?-Janet.

Dear Janet: It is true that I am conducting an evangelistic meeting in Hayti at this time. I am planning to conduct a big Bible School in Sikeston, giving a beautiful diploma to all those who graduate. I will also have free blood-pressure check and help for the needy.

Expert panel on nitritics nitrosamines will meet

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Expert Panel on Nitrites and Nitrosamines will meet here on Wednesday, August 17, at 9:30 a.m. The meeting -- which is open to the public -- will be held at the Jefferson Auditorium, 14th and Independence Avenue, S.W. This differs from the Federal Register announcement which stated the meeting would be held in Room 218-A, Administration Building.

Officials of USDA's Food Safety and Quality Service (FSQS) said that this is the fourteenth meeting of the panel, which was formed to study and develop recommendations on the use of nitrites and nitrates in cured meats. At the August 17 meeting, the panel will present their views concerning the issues that have been identified for inclusion in the final report. Discussion will be limited primarily to panel members but public comments or questions will be solicited during the meeting where appropriate.

Written statements may be filed, before or after the meeting, with the panel or with the Issuance Coordination Staff, Technical Services, FSQS, Room 4905, South Building, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250; or telephone (202) 447-6189. Comments will be available for public inspection.

Announcement of this meeting was published in the August 2 Federal Register.

Dear Ann Landers

Reader says women aren't men

Dear Ann Landers: In a recent column you said 95 per cent of men under 60 who are sexually impotent have nothing physically wrong. It's all mental.

Have you considered the possibility that women have caused the problem? So many females today want to be "independent." They resent it when a man offers a seat on the bus. ("I'm not crippled," I heard one woman say.) They don't want a man to protect them. ("I can take care of myself.")

These days females want to be lumberjacks (Jills?). They think they can do everything a man can do -- and better. Agreed they should have equal opportunities, but women are NOT men and they should acknowledge the difference without feeling inferior.

Don't laugh this off. It happened to me and ruined my marriage. I wonder how many other marriages suffered the same fate. Care to comment? -- California "Pig"

Dear Call: At the risk of sounding like a traitor to my sex I will say I'm in your corner. And a crowded corner it is. We have lots of company, so cheer up, Bub.

Dear Ann: One of the most valuable aspects of your column is that it allows people to learn from the mistakes of others. That's what this letter is all about. I address my remarks to Lou-- the woman who couldn't forgive her terminally-ill mother for having had an affair with her husband.

My own mother was a lot less than she should have been. She did not have a terminal illness -- she died suddenly before I could bring myself to forgive her. It has been 30 years now and not a day goes by but that I don't regret it.

My mother had to die with her sins but I must live with my lack of compassion and the knowledge that I set myself up as her judge.

So, I hope Lou sees this and does what she should do before it's too late. She will like herself better and hold her head a little higher. How can we ask God to forgive our sins when we refuse to forgive the sins of others?-- One Who Knows

Dear One: You've said it all. I can add nothing but the hope that all the Lous in this world will take your advice. It's the way to go.

Dear Ann Landers: Thank you for telling the world through your column about Parents Anonymous, the organization for mothers and fathers who are afraid they will hurt their kids physically.

I'd like to add my personal thanks to Parents Anonymous. I was an abusive parent. I joined Parents Anonymous just in time. It helped me love and understand myself and it may have saved my child's life.

Now we have moved again, this time to Stamfore, Conn. I learned there is a Parents Anonymous chapter here. The toll-free number in Connecticut is 1-800-842-2288.

I hope others with my problem will join. It could make a big difference in their lives. I thank God every night for Parents Anonymous. -- A Lucky Mother.

Open Mind

..When I see a movie with sex in it or something else, I sort of go crazy and masturbate. I'm 16 years old, an honor student, participate in sports, but this bad habit makes me so guilty, I'm miserable. I pray to God I quit, and I want to, very bad, but my will power weakens.

Once I went 2 weeks without it and felt great, but I always break down. I's usually about girls, but sometimes boys. This also scares me because I know or I hope I'm not homesexual. Please give advice for I cannot seek professional help in my town. I like girls, but if I don't stop this -- who knows.

In Desperate Need, Please.

Dear In Desperate Need, Please:

..First, permit me to assure you that your experience is common in growing, young persons. Nevertheless, the guilt you feel is a healthy sign that something negative is happening in you and needs correcting. Sexual phantasms occur often without seeking stimulation, so I strongly suggest that you avoid deliberate stimulation by avoiding junk movies, books, etc. Leave that for those who are truly sick.

Sexual powers awakening inside one are a God-given sign that one's life is meant to be out-directed- a reaching out to others in love and concern. Now, while you are still maturing, you are directing much of your energy toward self -- to self-satisfaction. Pick up on this signal and choose to be more involved with others in wholesome activities. Your sports and academic pursuits will offer you ample channels for your energies. Nourish your mind on these good and worthwhile endeavors.

You know that it is unhealthy to stuff your body with junk food, so don't crowd your mind with junk stimulation. You are a good young man and it's beneath your dignity.

Ask the Lord to forgive the past. Accept His forgiveness. Then go on living-now for others and not just for self. May God Bless You!

Dear In Desperate Need, Please:

Studies in the United States and Canada indicate that approximately 97 per cent of all males and 78 per cent of all females masturbate during one or more periods of their lives. This desire to masturbate is often particularly intense in adolescent males (as it is in your case), especially when other means of sexual release are inappropriate.

The act of masturbation is innocent and personal and relieves the body of tension. It does not cause one to "go crazy", not does it have any adverse physical effects; however, guilt about it can be potentially damaging to later adult sexual life.

The desperation you express in your lettere stems from the needless guilt and fear you are experiencing about yor masturbation. Adolescence is often a time of confusion regarding sexual feelings, but I believe that you realize how common masturbation is in our society, and as you learn to accept your sexual desires as a normal, healthy part of your total being, your feelings about them will become more positive.

Before I was born, my church gave to my parents ideals of life and love that made my home a place of strength and beauty. In helpless infancy my church joined my parents in consecrating me to Christ and in baptizing me in His name. My church enriched my childhood with the romance of religion and the lessons of life that have been woven into the texture of my soul. . . . . In the stress and storm of adolescence my church heard the surge of my soul, and she guided my footsteps by lifting my eyes toward the stars. When first my heart knew the strange awakenings of love, my church taught me to chasten and spiritualize my affections. When my heart was seamed with sorrow, . . . my church drew me to "the friend of all the weary" and whispered to me the hope of another morning, eternal and tearless. When my steps have slipped and I have known the bitterness of sin, my church has believed in me and . . . has called me back to live within the heights of myself. . . . My church calls me to her heart! She asks my service and my loyalty! She has a right to ask it!!! I will help her to do for others what she has done for me. Ode to garage sale goers

By Erma Bombeck

What is faster than a speeding bullet? More powerful than a locomotive? Able to leap tall buildings in a single jump?

Women at garage sales, that's who.

I had to see Garage Power firsthand to believe it. Before moving out of state, I found myself with a few excess trinkets. (Who am I kidding? The attic is so full of junk the county couldn't get the door open to dondemn it.)

My girl friend, Esther, said, "You are a natural for a garage sale."

"Why do you say that?" I asked.

"Because you are cheap."

"I don't think you understand," I sniffed, "that spreading one's personal wares out in a garage for public exhibition is not only crass, it smacks of being tacky."

"I made 32 bucks off of my junk," she said.

"Why didn't you say so?" I asked excitedly. "Get the card table and let's get started."

The garage sale began at 9 a.m. By 7:30 a.m., I had 15 cars parked on the driveway, 18 on the lawn, two in a ditch and a Volkswagen trying to parallel park between two andirons in my living room.

They grabbed and bought anything that wasn't pumping water, cemented in the ground, growing from seed or spit sparks at them when touched.

They bought cocktail toothpicks that were billed as "Like New" . . . radios guaranteed not to play ever. . . plastic flowers that had died . . toothless rakes. . . buckets with leaks. . .books of German military commands . . .and a ukulele that only knew one song, "The World Is Waiting For The Sunrise."

At one point I tried to shove through the crowd with a package in my hand. A woman grabbed it from me and said, "I'll give you 35 cents."

"No, really," I stammered. "This isn't.."

"Forty cents," she said, grabbing it, "and that is my last offer."

It is the first time anyone ever paid me 40 cents for my garbage.

By 4 p.m. I watched tiredly as a woman tried to coax my husband into her trunk.

"Esther," I said, "this is the most incredible sight I have ever seen."

"What's in that package under your arm?" she said.

"It's nothing," I hesitated.

"It's mildewed laundry," she shouted. "How much did you pay for it?"

"Thirty-five cents, but some of it still fits."

A tossed green salad is a great main course for a Saturday lunch or a Sunday night supper when you add to it strips of ham and cheese, anchovy fillets or caper-stuffed rolled anchovies. Smoked tongue may be used instead of the ham. Chicken may also be added.

ANN'S RARE ROAST BEEF

We've been asked to give this recipe.

2-rib roast of beef minus short ribs (4½ to 5 pounds)
Flour
Salt
Coarsely cracked black pepper

Place the refrigerator-cold beef in a shallow roasting pan. Rub with a little flour and sprinkle generously with salt and pepper. Place a tent of foil loosely over the top of the meat. Roast in a preheated 500-degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes. Turn off heat but do not open oven door. Allow the roast to remain in the oven for at least 1 hour, or until the oven is lukewarm, which occurs in about 2 hours. The roast will retain a crunchy outside, and an internal heat suitable for serving for as long as 4 hours. Adapted from "Good Food and How to Cook It" by Ann Seranne (Morrow).

ANN'S RARE ROAST BEEF

We've been asked to give this recipe.

2-rib roast of beef minus short ribs (4½ to 5 pounds)
Flour
Salt
Coarsely cracked black pepper

Place the refrigerator-cold beef in a shallow roasting pan. Rub with a little flour and sprinkle generously with salt and pepper. Place a tent of foil loosely over the top of the meat. Roast in a preheated 500-degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes. Turn off heat but do not open oven door. Allow the roast to remain in the oven for at least 1 hour, or until the oven is lukewarm, which occurs in about 2 hours. The roast will retain a crunchy outside, and an internal heat suitable for serving for as long as 4 hours. Adapted from "Good Food and How to Cook It" by Ann Seranne (Morrow).

Sweet Start

Sugar cane first sprouted on the island of New Guinea in the South Pacific and was carried north to India in prehistoric times. The Indians gave it a name: the sugar their crude methods produced looked like gravel, or, in Sanskrit, "sarkara," recognizable today as "sukkar" in Arabic, "sachar" in Russian, "Zucker" in German, "sucre" in French and "socker" in Swedish. And the bigger chunks produced what Indians called "knanda," or candy.

What's the law?

The case of the ungallant cabbie

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Myra's eyesight was so bad that not even antennae could have improved her reception. And it was a combination of her poor vision and an ungallant cab driver that landed her in a hospital one bleak evening.

Myra took a taxi to her aunt's house, which she did frequently, and the cabbie left her off at the wrong address -- at a house several doors away. What's more, the driver refused to help her to the front door even through Myra explained that she couldn't see too well.

The result: Finding herself on the porch of an unfamiliar house, Myra inadvertently stepped off the porch and into space. Landing five feet below, she sued the cab company for her injuries.

"Taking a passenger to the wrong address," Myra complained in court," was pure carelessness."

"Nonsense!" responded the cab driver. "A cabbie's not supposed to be able to identify a passenger's destination. If the passenger doesn't know where he's going, how's the cabbie supposed to know?"

If you were the judge, would you hold the taxi company liable for Myra's being delivered to the wrong address?

This is how the judge ruled: Yes. The judge held that considering Myra's known poor vision, the taxi driver was required to make sure that Myra was taken to the right address. What's more, added the judge, he was obliged to help her to the front door as she had requested, and not as a matter of gallantry, but as a duty owed by a taxi company to an infirm passenger.

Sweet Start

Sugar cane first sprouted on the island of New Guinea in the South Pacific and was carried north to India in prehistoric times. The Indians gave it a name; the sugar their crude methods produced looked like gravel, or, in Sanskrit, "sarkara," recognizable today as "sukkar" in Arabic, "sachar" in Russian, "Zucker" in German, "sucre" in French and "socker" in Swedish. And the bigger chunks produced what Indians called "knanda," or candy.

What's the law?

The case of the ungallant cabbie

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Myra's eyesight was so bad that not even antennae could have improved her reception. And it was a combination of her poor vision and an ungallant cab driver that landed her in a hospital one bleak evening.

Myra took a taxi to her aunt's house, which she did frequently, and the cabbie left her off at the wrong address -- at a house several doors away. What's more, the driver refused to help her to the front door even through Myra explained that she couldn't see too well.

The result: Finding herself on the porch of an unfamiliar house, Myra inadvertently stepped off the porch and into space. Landing five feet below, she sued the cab company for her injuries.

"Taking a passenger to the wrong address," Myra complained in court," was pure carelessness."

"Nonsense!" responded the cab driver. "A cabbie's not supposed to be able to identify a passenger's destination. If the passenger doesn't know where he's going, how's the cabbie supposed to know?"

If you were the judge, would you hold the taxi company liable for Myra's being delivered to the wrong address?

This is how the judge ruled: Yes. The judge held that considering Myra's known poor vision, the taxi driver was required to make sure that Myra was taken to the right address. What's more, added the judge, he was obliged to help her to the front door as she had requested, and not as a matter of gallantry, but as a duty owed by a taxi company to an infirm passenger.

TRIO OF PRE-SEASON NFL GAMES ON NBC-TV OPENS WITH VIKINGS-COLTS CLASH UAG. 19

The frost is far from the pumpkin, but football on the NBC Television Network is as close as Friday, Aug. 19 (7:30-10p.m. DST) – when the Minnesota Vikings, champions of the NFC, take on the Baltimore Colts, a solid contender for top honors in the race for the AFC championship

The Vikings-Colts battle is the first of three pre-season games of the National Football League which will be colorcast on NBC prior to the opening games of the regular season on Sunday, Sept. 18.

Following the Vikings-Colts opener August 19 will be the Baltimore Colts vs. Dallas Cowboys, Saturday, Aug. 27 (8 p.m.-11. DST); and the Pittsburgh Steelers vs. Dallas, Thursday, Sept. 8 (7:30 to 10:30 p.m. DST).

The contest between the Vikings and Colts offers an early look at two of the game's premier quarterbacks. It'll be Fran Tarkenton directing the strategy for Minnesota and Bert Jones calling the shots for Baltimore.

For fans of pro football on television, the assets of Tarkenton and Jones are well known. Tarkenton for his quick feet and scrambling finesse as he gets ready to throw a pass; Jones for his rifle arm, durability and the kind of all-around talent which puts him at the top of the list among the game's younger crop of quarterbacks. Last year, Jones threw for 3,104 yards and 24 touchdowns.

WILLIAM WINDOM TO MAKE SEVERAL APPEARANCES: ROD RAYLOR IS SERIES STAR

Darleen Carr and Charles Napier have been set for starring roles, and William Windom has been signed for several guest appearances, in NBC-TV's new historical adventure series, "The Oregon Trail," now filming in Flagstaff, Ariz. for the 1977-78 season (Wednesdays, 8-9 p.m. DST).

Carr will play Westward-bound spinster Margaret Devlin and Windom will appear as her improvident father, Peacky Devlin. Napier will portray the wagon train's scout and guide, mountain man Luther Sprague.

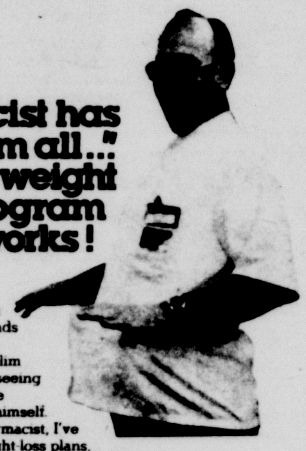
Pharmacist has "tried them all..." ...discovers weight control program that really works!



Pharmacist Dan Smith of Burger's Drug Store in St. Charles, Illinois is a NaturSlim "believer" after losing 18 pounds in just two weeks. After hearing so much about the NaturSlim program from customers and seeing the excellent results they were having, Dan decided to try it himself.

"In my many years as a pharmacist, I've seen and tried numerous weight-loss plans, but none have worked as well for me as NaturSlim. And NaturSlim is very nutritional too!"

After three months, Dan has not regained any of the lost pounds either, as so often happens when "rebounding" from starvation diet plans. He maintains his weight by taking NaturSlim once daily . . . and eating normally otherwise.

Dan says, "It was surprisingly easy, too! I didn't have to attend any weigh-ins, starve myself or do any special exercises."

With the NaturSlim program, there are no shots, drugs or long lists of forbidden foods. In fact, you are encouraged to eat a normal, well-balanced dinner every day.

The next time you are in the St. Charles area, stop by Burger's Drugs and see Dan yourself. He'll tell you personally what he thinks about NaturSlim!

TRIO OF PRE-SEASON NFL GAMES ON NBC-TV OPENS WITH VIKINGS-COLTS CLASH UAG. 19

The frost is far from the pumpkin, but football on the NBC Television Network is as close as Friday, Aug. 19 (7:30-10p.m. DST) – when the Minnesota Vikings, champions of the NFC, take on the Baltimore Colts, a solid contender for top honors in the race for the AFC championship

The Vikings-Colts battle is the first of three pre-season games of the National Football League which will be colorcast on NBC prior to the opening games of the regular season on Sunday, Sept. 18.

Following the Vikings-Colts opener August 19 will be the Baltimore Colts vs. Dallas Cowboys, Saturday, Aug. 27 (8 p.m.-11. DST); and the Pittsburgh Steelers vs. Dallas, Thursday, Sept. 8 (7:30 to 10:30 p.m. DST).

The contest between the Vikings and Colts offers an early look at two of the game's premier quarterbacks. It'll be Fran Tarkenton directing the strategy for Minnesota and Bert Jones calling the shots for Baltimore.

For fans of pro football on television, the assets of Tarkenton and Jones are well known. Tarkenton for his quick feet and scrambling finesse as he gets ready to throw a pass; Jones for his rifle arm, durability and the kind of all-around talent which puts him at the top of the list among the game's younger crop of quarterbacks. Last year, Jones threw for 3,104 yards and 24 touchdowns.

New welfare emphasis in rural areas

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall told a meeting of rural electric cooperative managers Tuesday that the Carter Administation is giving new emphasis to welfare programs in rural areas.

Marshall, a former rural electric cooperative member in Mississippi, said the Carter innovations would help make rural areas more attractive to urbanites who would like to live there.

In a speech to a conference of managers of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association in Kansas City, Marshall cautioned that going about the task wrongly would result in a "horror story.

Marshall said the Department of Labor is developing a rural strategy with two major parts.

First, he said the department is re-examining its internal programs to see how they can better fit rural areas. Second, the department is working with other federal agencies in an effort to help promote rural development.

"The most important objective of the Department of Labor now is to try and move toward full employment," Marshall said. "Unemployment costs us a lot and the significant thing about it is that the loss to our economy is permanent. One of the most perishable things we have is the work of a human being."

The labor secretary said that for every 1 per cent of the workforce unemployed, the Treasury loses about $16 billion.

He said unemployment is worst among working Americans under 24. One way to correct the problem, he said, is through the Carter Administration's public employment programs.

He said the programs will allow most workers by 1981 to earn a living that is 16 to 20 per cent above the poverty level.

Marshall said urban poor families are headed by women who do not work.

$100-a-year goal spawns $1-billion-a-year empire

NEW YORK (AP) — Curtis Carlson, whose original goal was to sell enough soap to make $100 a week, is now on schedule toward his current goal of $1 billion a year in sales.

When that goal is met he'll aim higher.

Goals accomplished beget goals to seek for Carlson, the Minneapolis entrepreneur who at age 63 personally owns hotels, restaurants, incentive companies, a construction concern, an advertising agency — and much, much more.

"One of my weaknesses is I can never see stopping," he said the other day in a telephone call from York, Maine, where he had anchored his 83-foot yacht after a cruise down the coast from Camden and Boothbay Harbor.

A setting such as this, although but for a few days, is not rare for Carlson but neither does it suggest his style. His work and pleasure mingle; his mind never stops dreaming of growth. It's his creative expression.

"I have always maintained that you will stay even with your competitor by working five days a week but you can get ahead of your competition by working six days," he has written about his business philosophy.

This, and goal setting, along with a masterful understanding of management, have helped the Carlson Companies, personally owned by him, to obtain a sales rate this year of $721 million. The $1 billion goal is for 1981.

Gold Bond (trading) Stamps, Raddison Hotels, Ardan Jewelers, TGI Friday's restaurants, Star Market, May Company, Country Kitchen, Indian Wells Oil Co. and Superior Fiber Products are among his companies.

There are many, many more, and many more are bound to be added too; it's the way things are at Carlson Companies, which now employs more than 10,000 workers.

While students of business will spend the next century analyzing what it is that sets Carlson apart, that makes him a phenomenon of enterprise akin to Ford and Carnegie and Edison and other giants of yesterday, some things already are clear.

Growth, for example, is not the exercise of predatory instincts; it is part of a management philosophy that equates growth with strength. Companies that fail to grow fail to attract and stimulate the best minds, says Carlson.

When a company reaches the point where slow growth causes its best managers to look for other opportunities, it is inevitable that profits begin to lag. And that, in Carlson's view, is a capitalistic sin.

How in the world did Carlson do it? Only snatches of the story are possible to understand and relate, such as what he said in an interview, that "I didn't build the company; I built an organization and the organization built the company."

Attorney says looters not motivated by need

NEW YORK (AP) — The Brooklyn district attorney says looters didn't ravage stores during last month's power blackout because they were hungry or poor. He says most simply were thieves.

Dist. Atty. Eugene Gold released figures Monday which he said contradict assertions by some public figures that during the blackout looters were preoccupied with stealing food.

Gold's figures are based on 176 persons indicted of 1,004 arrested in the July 13-14 looting in Brooklyn, the hardest hit of the five boroughs.

Some 48 per cent had full-time jobs, Gold said. One indicted man was a $372-a-week meat-cutter. Other defendants included a sailor from the USS Kansas and eight city or federal employes.

Eleven per cent of the indicted persons were students. Of the remaining 41 per cent classified as unemployed, 30 per cent were enrolled in paid poverty or training programs, Gold said.

The average annual income of the working defendants was $7,060. Just 8.5 per cent of the indicted were on welfare.

After last month's blackout, President Carter said that although there was "no excuse" for the looting, it was an "additional indication" of the need to revitalize poor urban areas "neglected too long."

"It is also important that public officials like myself try to understand the reasons for it," Carter said then.

Gold said Monday that Carter and others need to "re-evaluate their statements" in light of the new figures.

"It seems to me these figures dispute a great deal of what has been said about the looters," Gold added. "They call into question the assertion that hunger was behind the looting."

Figures showed that of 145 Brooklyn stores looted, only 12 were supermarkets, groceries or butcher shops.

The Education Ladder

There are sharp differences in the nation's educational profile, according to The Conference Board. Only 15 per cent of the 65-and-over population have had any college training. But among those between 25 and 34, 40 per cent are university-educated.

Supermarkets mount campaign to check fast-food restaurant growth

Associated Press Writer

Worried by the growth of fast-food restaurants, supermarkets are trying to keep customer dollars by offering more ready-to-eat products and telling people it costs less to eat at home.

"Obviously they (the restaurants) are a threat, the way more and more of them spring up all the time," said Bill Foley, corporate meat coordinator for the Boston-headquartered First National supermarket chain.

"It's hard to put a finger on," Foley said, adding that the fast-food outlets have hit particularly hard at grocery store meat departments.

In response, First National has added new items to its delicatessen department and is urging customers to compare prices. A package of chopped meat, for example, carries a label saying: "Make your own quarter-pound hamburger for 27 cents."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture says the rate of growth of the fast-food business slowed slightly during the recession, but is expected to continue steady through the 1980s. The department said a new analysis showed that 20 major fast-food chains plan to have 46,562 outlets in operation in the United States by 1980.

Norm Healy, national sales manager for Swift & Co., recently told an audience at the convention of the National Association of Retail Grocers: "In less than three years there will be 1.5 fast food restaurants for every supermarket in America and some 30,000 convenience stores offering fast-food take-out service. You can watch them grow or you can meet them head on and turn the threat into profits."

Healy urged the grocers to concentrate on delicatessen and bakery offerings which require little or no preparation at home. "Deli-bakery food service is an all-encompassing term," he said. "It describes a booming market valued at $4 to $5 billion annually. It is composed of the service deli, the service bakery, hot-to-go foods, catering, snack bars and cafeterias."

Some stores — particularly in the West — have added their own restaurants, but most supermarkets have avoided in-store snack bars. A survey by the Food Marketing Institute, which sponsored a special session on fast foods at the group's May convention in Dallas, showed that 10.8 per cent of new stores opened last year included snack bars or in-store restaurants, about the same level as in 1972.

Many grocery retailers are trying to turn price into a selling point. The price of eating out generally has risen about twice as fast as the cost of food at the grocery store.

Bruce Babcock of Banquet Foods Corp., which produces frozen items, told the FMI audience about the company's "Eat In and Bank It" advertising campaign which centers around the claim that it costs less to eat at home, even if you use prepared foods.

He told the store officials: "The take-out user is in your store every week. ... You can use this resource to remind your customers to compare prices for supermarket meals versus meals eaten out. ... Pricing is one of the areas the take-out people are vulnerable."

Publix Super Markets in Florida recently launched its own campaign on price. One ad, for fried chicken, shows a bucket similar to that used by a fast-food outlet, with a $1 sales slip in it and asks: "Is the price of your take-out chicken hard to swallow?" The body of the advertisement answers: "Maybe it's because you're paying up to a dollar extra for the name on the bucket. At Publix, nine pieces of crisp, Southern fried chicken cost less than $2.75."

In Boston, Purity Supreme Supermarkets took direct aim at McDonald's, with an advertisement asking: "Who pays when they do it all for you?" The advertisement said a total dinner for four at a fast-foot outlet costs $7.95, compared to $3.72 for the same meal made at home with products from the supermarket. "There's no price like home," the ad read. "You never forgot how good home cooking is. Maybe you just forgot how little it costs."

The USDA estimates that Americans eat about one out of every five meals away from home and spend just over a third of their food dollars doing so.

Teasdale conservation choices called mistake

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Conservation Federation of Missouri's executive committee has labeled Gov. Joseph Teasdale's appointments of a close personal advisor and a campaign contributor to the state Conservation Commission a mistake.

Teasdale named W. Robert Aylward, one of his key behind-the-scenes advisors, and J. E. Dunn Jr., a substantial contributor to his 1976 campaign, to the four-member, bipartisan panel last week. Both men are Kansas City Democrats.

The executive committee, speaking for the 28,000-member federation of conservationists in the state, said after a special meeting this week that it feels "it is a mistake to appoint two members from the same city."

The committee urged Teasdale to make commission selections based on the spirit of the 1936 constitutional amendment that made the Conservation Commission and independent constitutional agency. The panel renewed the call for the elimination of political considerations and for nominees who have "a zealous interest in the entire conservation program, and who represent the various interests of the state.

"We take this opportunity to stress that in reminding you of our concerns, we are not challenging the fitness, qualifications or interest in conservation of your indicated appointees inasmuch as they are unknown to the active conservationists, conservation clubs and conservation organizations in this state," the committee said in a statement.

"What is intended is call your attention to the fact that there are outstanding candidates residing in the eastern half of the state, who would add geographical balance and diverse business experience to the Conservation Commission."

The two remaining commission members are G. Andy Runge of Mexico and Robert Talbot of Neosho. Both are Republicans.

Aylward and Dunn, both appointed to terms that expire in June 19-.83, must be confirmed by the state Senate by mid-September or step down from the commission.

Teasdale was out of the state on a week's vacation today and could not be reached for comment. But at the time he named Aylward and Dunn, he said he felt their business experience was needed on the commission in light of the new one-eighth cent sales tax earmarked for conservation purposes.

That tax will generate an additional $25 million a year for the commission, turning its operation into what Teasdale called "big business."

While acknowledging that both men were close personal firends, Teasdale said he felt he had to have someone on the commission he had full trust in since the commission will act independently of his office.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:

Long a reader of your wonderful column, I have used many of the ideas given, and wanted to send you one of mine.

Some day I will send you several but this one I want to get off to you before I forget it, as my mother taught me early, "Do it now"!

I am a hospital staff nurse and have a collection of small costume dolls dressed to represent the different departments of the hospital.

Of course, I have to sew these costumes and I press as I sew. Also, these dolls are on display at the hospital and as I want them to always look as nice as possible, the garments require frequent laundering — and pressing.

I have found that when ironing these tiny clothes a padded tongue depressor makes a very good "sleeve board," useful to get into small places with the iron.

These wooden depressors can be bought at any drugstore. To pad them, pin or sew several thicknesses of cloth around it.

Mothers may not always take this much trouble for children's small doll clothes, but among your vast readers I'm sure that many can use this idea.

Bettie Musser

Wouldn't be at all surprised! Sounds like a fantabulously clever idea when pressing those tiny doll clothes.

You're a doll to share it...

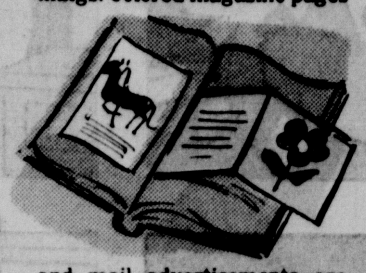
LITTLE SCRAPBOOKS

DEAR HELOISE:

I kept scrapbooks when our children were small of anything that interested them as they learned about all kinds of new things. Colored magazine pages and mail advertisements are good sources of these.



Children learn a great deal as well as talk about what they've seen. Helps to learn correct pronunciation and increase vocabulary as we "read" the pictures together.

As they discovered new things in the pictures, experiences broadened.

We added some things to feel that were bumpy, and used foldouts from greeting cards glued to the center of the book.

Our 5-year-old still loves to look through them and the older girls take them when baby-sitting with younger children.

JUNIOR DESK SET!

DEAR HELOISE:

I completely cleared off a shelf in my kitchen cabinet and made a desk for my 2-year-old.

I covered it with washable adhesive-backed paper and he keeps his crayons, paper, pencils and an assortment of other treasures there. He has a little chair that is just the right height for him to sit in.

It's a perfect arrangement because I seem to be always in the kitchen, and with his "desk" right in the kitchen, I can do my chores plus keep an eye on him.

HAPPY 'BIRTH' DAY

DEAR HELOISE:

In bringing home a new baby sister from the hospital, big sister suggested a "Birth" day party for the newborn.

So, with streamers, balloons and a zero candle on a special coffee cake, we celebrated Emily's "Birth" day.

Auntie had taken big sister shopping for a present and we had a couple of little packages for her as well.

We all had a delightful time and found it a wonderful way for our pre-schooler to welcome home her sister as joyously as we did.

LETTER OF LAUGHTER???

DEAR HELOISE:

Someone once told me one could get rid of pigeons by placing a ceramic owl where the pigeons could see it, or close to their nests...

My husband is a pastor of a church and, believe me, pigeons believe in going to church, too.

They build nests in the columns above the church porch, and when we'd come to church on Sunday morning, eggs would have rolled out of their nests and the goop would be all over the floor.

I thought about the owls, so a ceramic one was placed on the top of each column.

Lo and behold, it worked! 'Twas almost miraculous the way those pigeons would fly to the outside of the porch, cock their heads sideways, and after a few "looks" took off and never came back.

Lucille Moore

PERFECT PICKUP

DEAR HELOISE:

We use two layers of nylon netting from the ceiling to the floor, anchoring it at the top and bottom, on which to pin our children's 4-H and school ribbons.

Saves lots of holes in their rooms as they want everything hung.

The netting matches the color of the room and is barely visible.

B. A.

TO CAP IT ALL!

DEAR HELOISE:

Glue caps from 10-ounce soft drink bottles on the outside of the lid of a cigar box.

Spray the box inside and out with gold paint.

Now you have a beautiful "Treasure Box"!

D. L. Niles

TV'S NEW TOPS

DEAR HELOISE:

Never can find a pencil? I took an old straw holder and put my pens and pencils in it. All I have to do is raise the top up and they come up, and I pick the one I need.

Real neat.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Hair is different. 2. Frame is smaller. 3. Glass is missing. 4. Dog's ear is moved. 5. Tail is different. 6. Towel bar is missing.

NANCY is so-so in math, but when her teacher posed this deceptive problem she came up with the answer in just a few minutes time. Can you do as well? Let's see.

Given the diagram above, you are asked to insert these eight numbers so that each of the square's four sides has a total of 28: 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16. Each number is to be used just once.

As a starter, we'll give you this clue: Numbers 6, 8, 10, and 16 appear in corners.

Now, how long will it take you to make the insertions.

Beginning top left, insert clockwise: 16, 4, 8, 14, 6, 12, 10, 2.

BULLETIN BOARD

● MIXED BAG! Find an edible nut among consecutive letters in each sentence: 1. Topic A: She wants out. 2. His type can't be trusted. 3. We'll clinch the deal Monday.

1. Cashew. 2. Pecan. 3. Almond.

● Drop a dime into a bottle. Insert a loose-fitting cork. Now, get the dime out of the bottle without taking out the cork. How's it done?

Shove the cork in; shake out the dime.

● Add 1/4 the time from noon to now to 1/2 the time from now to noon tomorrow. What time is it?

It's nine thirty-six p. m.
